

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

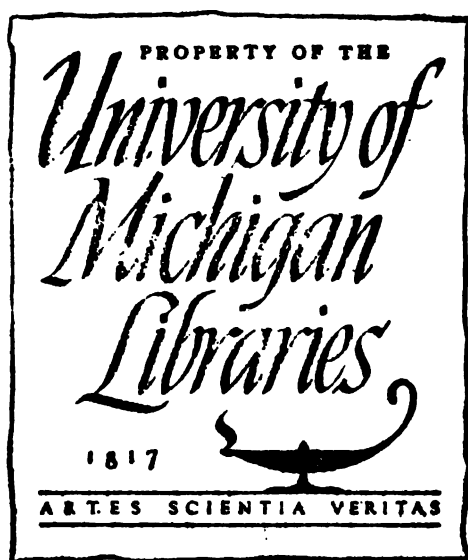

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFATORY NOTE.

THE Annual Catalog for the year 1905 is the first annual supplement to the initial permanent volumes of the American Catalog series of the twentieth century. It resumes the form of the Annual Catalog of 1900 for reasons connected with the plan of the permanent five-yearly volumes. These permanent five-yearly issues have worked out on a two-volume plan, the first volume of which is an actual cumulation into one alphabet of the short-title entries by author, title, subject and series, and the second volume an association of the five separate alphabets of the full-title entries with descriptive notes, an alphabet for each year of the period. The present annual publication is in two similar parts, the short-title entries for 1905 corresponding to the first volume on the five-yearly plan, and the full-title entries, with descriptive notes, for 1905, corresponding to the second volume on the five-yearly plan.

The first alphabet of the present volume will be superseded by a cumulation into one alphabet for the five years of the second period, 1905-1909, and there will possibly be a cumulation at a mid-period, but not each year. The second alphabet, however, is arranged for permanent preservation, so that at the end of the five years the several Annual Catalogs may be taken apart, the short-title alphabets discarded, and the five full-title alphabets bound together to make the second volume of the new five-year period.

It is hoped that this volume for the year 1905, covering comprehensively the information afforded by The Publishers' Weekly for that period, will serve all the purposes of the booktrade and under the plan outlined for the five-yearly issues will afford the maximum of convenience at a minimum of expense.

BOOK PRODUCTION IN 1905

BOOK PRODUCTION IN 1905

IN THE UNITED STATES

THERE were recorded by THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY in 1905, through the "Weekly Record of New Publications," 8112 books. The new editions of standard works are included in this total, but few of the cheap paper series, mostly re-issues of old books. The omission of cheap series makes the count seem less than in 1904, but actually there were more books published than in any previous year, our table showing that we recorded 7514 new books against 6971 of 1904, and 598 new editions. The two tables that follow, each dividing the year's output into twenty classes, are strikingly alike, the figures in many cases differing so slightly as scarcely worthy of mention. Table no. 1, contrasting the books of 1904 and 1905, gives Fiction the lead again. Literature and Collected Works is second in the list, taking a step above Theology and Religion. Poetry and the Drama, Law and Juvenile, are all fuller than in previous years. Little change is to be noted in the remaining second, those by English or other foreign authors made in this country according to the demands of copyright law, and third, the books in English imported bound or in sheets, these three classes comprising the book production of the United States in 1905. The first and second classes are almost all copyright books. This table, like the former, scarcely claims to be exactly correct, as it is impossible always to trace the history of a work, from its author to its final publication. The table shows 5719 books by American authors against 5978 of 1904; 1426 books by English or other foreign authors (made here) against 1288 of 1904, and 967 books or sheets imported, against 1025 of 1904. The reprints were, as usual, the largest in Fiction, amounting to 314, far less, however, than in several years previous, when almost double that number of English or other foreign novels were reprinted. The most evident fact demonstrated by this table is the great number of books by American authors published in 1905 in all classes of literature.

REPORT OF THE REGISTER OF COPYRIGHTS FOR 1905.

THE copyright business for the calendar year 1905, according to Thorvald Solberg, the Register of Copyrights, exceeded that of the year 1904, the entire entries amounting to 116,780, as against 106,577 for 1904, and the net amount of the fees reaching $78,518, as against $75,520 in the preceding year. The business for the year as tabulated by the office of the Register of Copyrights is as follows:

These figures, when compared with those for the last calendar year, 1904, show increases in every branch of the copyright business. The fees have increased from $75,520 to $78,518, or $2,998; the number of entries from 106,577 to 116,789, or 10,212; the number of articles deposited from 192,528 to 213,498, or 20,970.

The current work of the Copyright Office is now kept as nearly up to date as is possible in an office where the daily business is so fluctuating. At this date, 4.30 P.M., January 4, 1906, all applications received during the calendar year 1905 have been acted upon, and all registrations made except 273 non-certificate entries, and all certificates and notification cards made and mailed. The entries have been indexed and catalogued for December 30, all classes, the index cards made during the year numbering 186,413.

The deposited articles have been catalogued, stamped, and credited as follows: Class A, books proper to and including December 30; books II. and III. to December 26; Class B, periodicals, to December 30; Classes C, D, E, F, G and H to December 26; and Class I, original works of art, to December 30.

A. APPLICATIONS ACTED UPON AND TITLES FILED AND NUMBERED.

Class A. Books, to No. 134,843, December 30, 1905.
B. Periodicals, to No. 106,536, December 30, 1905.
C. Musical compositions, to No. 111,316, December 30, 1905.
D. Dramatic compositions, to No. 7,793, December 30, 1905.
E. Maps and charts, to No. 8,761, December 30, 1905.
F. Engravings, cuts, and prints, to No. 38,367 December 30, 1905.
G. Chromos and lithographs, to No. 12,054, December 30, 1905.
H. Photographs, to No. 71,433, December 30, 1905.
I. Original works of art, to No. 16,606, December 30, 1905.

All of the above titles are recorded to December 30, 1905, inclusive, except 273 non-certificate entries of Class C, which are recorded to December 29, 1905, inclusive.

Certificates for all entries to December 30, 1905, have been written and mailed.

Assignments: 763 received, January 1, 1905, to December 30, 1905, and all recorded.

INDEX AND CATALOGUE.

The titles for all classes are indexed to December 30, 1905. The entries are indexed on cards by names of proprietors and titles. The total catalogue cards for the calendar year 1905 number 186,413, and these are added to the general alphabetical index, now containing about 1,278,404 cards.

Of the cards added to the general index of copyright entries during the year 7090 were for books and were supplied by the Catalogue Division of the Library of Congress. The great and steady growth of this card index is shown at a glance by a comparison of the number of cards added during the last five years: 1901—122,007; 1902—146,317; 1903—163,226; 1904—174,164; 1905—186,413. The total number of cards in the index is now considerably over one million, and at the present rate of increase every five years or so a million additional cards will be added.

"CATALOGUE OF TITLE ENTRIES."

Four quarterly volumes of 13 numbers each were published, containing 5421 pages of octavo print.

The volumes of the Catalogue of Title Entries now printed are as follows: July 1, 1891, to December 31, 1897, 13 semi-annual volumes; January, 1898, to December, 1905, 32 quarterly volumes, or 45 volumes in all, of which the last twenty are provided with quarterly indexes.

ARTICLES DEPOSITED.

Catalogued, Stamped, and Credited, as follows:

- Class A. Books: (a) Books and pamphlets, to December 30, 1905.
 (b) Booklets, leaflets, etc., to December 26, 1905.
 (c) Periodical contributions, to December 26, 1905.
 B. Periodicals, to December 30, 1905.
 C. Musical compositions, to December 26, 1905.
 D. Dramatic compositions, to December 26, 1905.
 E. Maps and charts, to December 26, 1905.
 F. Engravings, cuts, and prints, to December 26, 1905.
 G. Chromos and lithographs, to December 26, 1905.
 H. Photographs to December 26, 1905.
 I. Photographs of works of art, to December 30, 1905.

FEES AND SALARIES.

The earned fees paid into the Treasury for the year ($78,518) exceeded the amount expended for salaries, which was $74,600.37. The additional expenditures during the year for stationery and other supplies cannot at this date be obtained from the chief clerk of the library, but for the six months of the year they amounted to but $309.63, and the year's contingent expenditures, therefore, should be under $1000; the yearly average for the last five years has been $954.29.

The appropriations for 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, and the first half of the fiscal year 1906 include the sum of $25,740 to be used in bringing up the arrears of work prior to July 1, 1897, which amount should therefore be deducted from the total sum for appropriations for service as not properly a charge upon the current work of the office, leaving the excess of fees earned over appropriations used for service $125,675.39 for the eight and one-half years.

The copyright fees are not, however, the most valuable assets of the office. During the year the articles deposited and credited numbered 213,498 articles. This large deposit of books, periodicals, maps, music, engravings, photographs, etc., includes many articles of considerable value which the Library of Congress would otherwise require to purchase, and these articles therefore represent an annual acquisition of property to the value of many thousands of dollars.

The deposited articles for the last five calendar years were as follows: 1901, 161,980; 1902, 173,234; 1903, 180,527; 1904, 192,528; 1905, 213,498; total, 921,767.

Of these articles one copy is sent for the use of the public to the Reading Room, the Law Library, the Division of Maps, the Prints Division, or the Music Division, while the other is filed in the Copyright Office. This latter collection now contains 1,508,707 publications received under the operation of the copyright laws from July 10, 1870, to December 30, 1905, including 177,939 books, 287,997 pamphlets and leaflets, 13,449 dramas, 347,395 musical compositions, 32,895 maps and charts, 803 atlases, 54,448 chromos and lithographs, 184,487 photographs and stereograms, and 113,091 engravings.

The total number of registrations made in the Copyright Office from July 10, 1870, (the date of the first registration,) to December 30, 1905, thirty-five and a half years, is 1,686,589, while the total applied fees for these entries amount to $1,216,786.81. Of this amount $652,012.81 was reported for copyright fees for the twenty-seven years from July 10, 1870, to June 30, 1897, and $564,774 for the applied fees for the last eight and one-half years from July 1, 1897, to December 30, 1905.

IN EUROPE.

ENGLAND.

THE total number of books reported by the London Publishers' Circular during 1905 is almost the same as in 1904—only four score fewer. "The number of theological books," according to our English contemporary, "in spite of a fall of thirty in November, shows an increase on the year, due more to Francis of Assisi, Thomas à Kempis, and other devotional authors, than to Torrey and Alexander or Church and Education. The number of educational works is a hundred down, so is that of political and commercial books and of reprinted novels. The issue of new novels is almost to a unit the same as last year (1731—1733). The number of law books reported is practically unchanged, so is that of books on the arts and sciences, and that of biographical and historical works. In belles-lettres [the Publishers' Circular's] previous table showed a falling off of nearly a hundred, but this table shows an increase of one hundred and sixty-one. A slight increase is shown in books on journeyings and geography, poetry books and dramatic works, year books and serials, medical and surgical works. But for Africa and for the tariff question political books would be few indeed."

The analytical table prepared by The Publishers' Circular makes the following showing by classes:

FRANCE.

THE number of books published in France during 1905, as recorded by the Bibliographie de la France was 12,416, or 277 more than in 1904. The number of musical publications recorded in 1905 was 6197, as against 6429 in 1904, and the number of engravings, lithographs and photographs recorded in 1905 was 738, or 189 less than in 1904. As pointed out last year, in order to determine the exact number of books as distinguished from pamphlets, theses, leaflets and similar minor publications it would be safe to deduct between 2000 and 3000 titles. Last year the difference between the records of the Bibliographie de la France, the official booktrade journal which records all printed matter without regard to its merits as literature, and those of the Bureau of the Ministry of the Interior, which takes cognizance of only the more stable element in French booktrade production, amounted to exactly 2858 titles.

THE ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOG

Full titles by Authors

NOTE

In this catalog the books are recorded under (1) author, in Clarendon type; anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics. The figures in parentheses are not the imprint date, but refer to the date of "The Publishers' Weekly" in which full title entry will be found and not to the day of publication, for which information should be sought in the full title entry thus indicated. Where not specified, the binding is cloth.

Since July, 1902, the prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded in this list by a double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. The prices of fiction (not net) published under the rules are preceded by a dagger †. The prices of net books not covered by the rules, whether published by members of the American Publishers' Association or not, are preceded by a single asterisk, and the word net follows the price.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tl. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights. In cases where the record is not made directly from the books, the designations 4to, 8vo, 12mo, etc., are used.

Months are abbreviated as follows: Ja January; F February; Mr March; Ap April; My May; Je June; Jl July; Ag August; S September; O October; N November; D December.

The full name of publisher and address will be found in the Directory of American Publishers, pp. xv-xxxvi.

- Abbott, Lyman, D.D. The Christian ministry. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. [My.] c. 19+317 p. D. cl., $1.50 net.
 In place of discussing "Why do people not go to church?" as ministers constantly do, Dr. Abbott suggests that it is equally pertinent to ask "How do any people ever go to church?" The object of this work is to furnish an answer to this question, to indicate to priests and preachers what it is which induces half the population of New York city to lay aside their commercial pursuits and gather in their churches every seventh day; to interpret to themselves, the men and women who form these congregations, and explain to them what it is that they are often unconsciously seeking; and to indicate to those who rarely or never go to church the advantage which they might secure if they were, in this respect, to conform to the custom.
- Abbott, Lyman, D.D. The great companion. New ed. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. [Mr.] c. 160 p. 12°, cl., $1 net.

 These lectures, delivered to the Philadelphia Divinity School students, embody Dr. Abbott's conclusions on industrial problems after five years' investigations conducted not only in the library, but also in mills, factories, etc. His aim is to apply the principles or the spirit inculcated by Jesus Christ to our present industrial questions. The sub-titles of the four lectures outline the argument: 1, The industrial problem; 2, The political solution—regulation; 3, The economic solution—reorganization; 4, The ethical solution—regeneration.
- Abbott, Lyman, D.D. One who loved his fellowmen: an appreciation. [N. Y., Gilliss Press,] 1904. c. 8°, cl. (privately printed.)
 The subject of the paper is C: Baszillai Spahr, 1860-1904.

- Adams, Andy. The outlet; il. by E. Boyd Smith. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. [Ap.] c. 10+370 p. D. cl., †$1.50.
In his former books "The log of the cow-boy" and "A Texas matchmaker" the hero, Tom Quirk, told the story of cattle on the drive and on the range, and he here relates his experiences in finding a market for a herd. At the close of the Civil War the need for a market for the surplus cattle of Texas was as urgent as it was general. Texas did not mature the cattle into marketable form, but after they had been driven north and double-wintered they became very valuable. The part the railroads played in solving the problem what to do with the immense herds of Texas cattle in the early 70's is vividly brought out.
- Adams, C.: Laban. Mechanical drawing; technique and working methods for technical students. Bost., C. L. Adams, 1905. [Mr20.] c. 4+204 p. il. diagrs., Q. cl., $3.

David Ransom, a western farmer, a man of integrity, loyalty and simple piety, has a wayward brother who drifts to the East where, after becoming engaged to a New England woman several years his senior, he spoils his own future by amusing himself with a pretty, uneducated girl, whom he eventually marries. Their child, through a series of tragic and mysterious events, is adopted by her uncle, David Ransom. The story tells how the girl at length finds out her relationship to her adopted parents and how she is brought in contact with her father's old love and her adopted son.

Alexander, W: The life insurance company. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. [My.] c. 9+290 p. D. (Appleton's business ser.) cl., $1.50.

The fundamental principles upon which life insurance is based and the manner in which these principles are applied in practice, are illustrated by the building up of an imaginary company. Three facts underlie all life insurance: 1. All life insurance costs money to the company that grants it; 2. This cost can be accurately determined; 3. That this cost need not be taken for granted, but can be readily grasped by any person of ordinary intelligence. The money secured by life insurance in the world to-day amounts to almost $25,000,000,000. The author is secretary of Equitable Life Insurance Company and not to be confounded with the author of "The Chadwick case."

"The relations of the United States with the Barbary powers a century ago form an interesting and romantic episode in American history which has never before been presented as a complete story. While the picturesque exploits of Preble and Decatur are familiar, other adventures of American seamen and consuls among the pirates of the Mediterranean have escaped notice, or are barely mentioned in most histories. It has been necessary to explore original records for many of the details. The various events, scattered over a period of about forty years, are here brought together."—Preface.

It first points out specific and similar constitutional features under "Federalism and the Bicameral system," "The parley system; Government by cabinet, and "The demarcation of powers." Then takes separate constitutions of France, the United States, Switzerland, Prussia, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Scandinavia, other European States and the British Empire—and carefully analyzes them.

Altshuler, Jos. Alex. The candidate: a political romance. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [Mr.] c. 3+429 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

From the moment James Grayson is nominated for President of the United States until he is elected five months later, the story winds its way through true-to-life pictures of a Presidential Candidates' campaign, in which appears a charming romance. In Grayson's western tour of speech-making he is accompanied by Mrs. Grayson, his niece, a dashing girl from Idaho and the correspondent of a leading New York daily—the two latter of course fall in love with each other. The narrative is said to be founded upon the political experience of a prominent public man.

Ukiyo-ye is the Popular School of Japanese Art, the outcome of a thousand years of growth and characterized by the development of color printing. The author gives a sketch of Japanese art history with its earliest schools, Tosa and Kano, which flourished independently till the middle of the 18th century, when the genius of the popular artists formed the school of Ukiyo-ye. Then follow chapters on the leading artists, Hokusai, Utamaro, Hiroshige, and others, with descriptions of the process of color printing. The book is printed on Japanese paper, on one side only, is illustrated by many excellent reproductions of pictures, and is bound in decorated art linen.

Designed to meet the needs of students beginning to study the forms of writing, needs that have been disclosed year after year by the students entering Cornell University, where Prof. Andrews is instructor in English. This is not a selection from the great writers. The descriptive selections deal largely with scenes in America; the narratives are largely narratives of fact that do not deal with difficult situations or complex emotions; short paragraphs from newspapers are included to show how conciseness and vividness give interest to the little events of every-day life.

The return of Dr. Roger Ahlstrom—"John Varholm's heir"—to the little manufacturing town in America where he was born, in his twenty-seventh year, is the opening event of the story. He had been finishing his studies in Europe, where he had lost his wife and parents, and had come back to his early home with his little girl, sad and dispirited. The Denwold mills left him by his uncle first bring a fresh interest in his life, in his efforts to better the condition of things generally. A new romance also springs up in his heart. There are some reminiscent scenes from the Civil War.

Prefaced by an introduction by Dr. Nansen, Lieutenant Armitage, who was second in command of the British National Antarctic Expedition, tells the story of the lives during three years in South Polar regions of half a hundred men, their amusements as well as their work. Captain Scott, the commander of the expedition, wrote the official history, so to speak, of the voyage of the Discovery. Lieutenant Armitage's book, however, gives no scientific theories nor technical data, but is a simple record of the everyday life of the participants.

Armour, J: P. Edenindia: a tale of adventure. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham Co., [1905. S.] c. 4-317 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The hero, a rich young man about New York City, is suddenly informed by his mother that his fortune is gone and on the same day learns that his fiancée has broken her engagement. He goes to work and for a rest goes to Vermont. On a hot night he goes to sleep in his uncle's airship after pulling it up 200 feet above the ground. It breaks loose, and when the young man awakens he is in Edenindia, somewhere the other side of the world. He meets many adventures, finds a long-lost sister and returns to retrieve the fortunes of his family.

Their aim has been to treat the subject from a theoretical as well as from a practical standpoint, so as to produce a book which could be used as a text in Technical Institutions as well as a general engineering reference book for those interested in railway problems. With this object in view, the use of calculus has been avoided, the differential co-efficient being employed but occasionally. Where calculus methods appear, the same formulæ are expressed in addition in algebraic form."—Preface.

Mr. and Mrs. Moulton and their two daughters, intensely proper and quite commonplace Americans, decide to include Spain in their itinerary even if they have to travel third-class for obvious reasons. Catalina Shore, a California heiress who has lived her days on a ranch, is a member of their party and is constantly outraging their ideas of conventionality. Complications arise with the appearance of an English army officer and an enamoured Spanish peasant, and love making even in the Alhambra and Toledo and at a bull fight becomes difficult and full of surprises.

Atkinson, Fred. Washington. The Philippine Islands. Bost., Ginn, 1905. c. 4+426 p. il. O. cl., $3 net.

The author, as the first General Superintendent of Education for the Philippines, had special opportunities for learning the actual conditions by visits to practically every part of the archipelago and by conferences with Filipinos as well as Americans, both civil and military. Trips to Java, China, Japan and India have, furthermore, given him standards of comparison. After a general introduction the geography and history of the Islands are separately treated; then follows much information concerning climate, public health, the people, their superstitions and religion, the native and foreign government, education, etc. Mr. Atkinson is optimistic concerning the future of the Philippines, though he thinks "the Filipinos are incapable of self-government" at present, and that "granting independence in any near future would be a great error."

"The present book is the result of a revision and elaboration of the author's 'Elementary botany,' N. Y., 1898. The general plan of the parts on physiology and general morphology remains unchanged. A number of the chapters in the physiological part are practically untouched, while others are thoroughly revised and considerable new matter is added, especially on the subjects of nutrition and digestion. The principal chapters on general morphology are unchanged or only slightly modified, the greatest change being in a revision of the subject of the morphology of fertilization in the gymnosperms and angiosperms in order to bring this subject abreast of the discoveries of the past few years."—Preface.

Montefano, a little Italian hill-village, is the scene. Donna Bianca, the heiress to the village estates, is brought here by her step-mother to prevent her marrying a young Roman engineer not of noble birth. Her step-mother's brother aspires to her hand and the house priest, a man of no character, aids him in his plots. The village priest, an ideal character, comes to the rescue. The rents on the estates went up; the peasants rose, and a most dramatic riot is quelled by the village priest. He learns all the facts and helps the young people to lasting happiness.

His father takes him from school and sends him to the country with his elder brother for the summer. The boys fall into the clutches of a wicked old man, who pretends he is the uncle they are seeking, and need all their "pluck" to bear the succession of disagreeable incidents that follow.

Banks, Mrs. Nancy Huston. The little hills. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. c. 6+325 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

The author of "Oldfield" has written a story of the little hills of daily life that are at times so hard to climb. A girl full of ideals marries a dying clergyman, promising to take care of his helpless father and most uncompromising step-mother. The characters of the unnamed little American spot who criticize her actions are graphically described. She finds help and comfort from an unexpected source and all ends happily in a most unexpected manner.

The doings of about thirty boys in a camp in New Hampshire for the summer months. They are under the charge of a grown man, who puts them through, each day, an interesting programme of exercise, consisting of bathing, games, rowing, swimming, etc. Four out of the number of elder boys take the lead in everything. They are good looking, manly fellows, and have various adventures. A football game ends the story.

Barbour, Ralph H: An orchard princess; il. by Ja. Montgomery Flagg. Phil., Lippincott, 1905. [S.] c. 3-219 p. sq. O. cl., †$2.

A spring-time love story. Miles Fallon, man of the world, writer of Western stories, goes to visit an artist friend in a sleepy Connecticut village. There he comes upon his Orchard Princess painting among the apple trees. But after a week of meetings by chance, when there is much bright, audacious talk, the golden-haired girl suddenly disappears, leaving a note in which she forbids him to follow her. Six months later on Christmas Day, they are brought together in the same place and explanations and avowals put an end to uncertainty for both.

Barry, J: Dan. Our best society. N. Y., Putnam, 1905. c. 5+362 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A brisk satire on the inane features of so-called "best society" in the large cities of the United States at present. The idle rich and their imitators and hangers on are realistically described. A young author desiring peace and quiet is thrust into the giddy whirl by his wife who is at first fascinated by meeting authors, playwrights, painters and society leaders. The decadent stage of the day and the idiocy of the wit and repartee are done to the life. Some startling methods of social progress make the plot. After a pretty hard year the couple who have seen much decide that "our best society" may be found within their own cosy apartment.

His preface says: "It is with the hope of increasing, if ever so little, the interest in military history which recent great events have awakened, and of adding a concise account of the most critical phase of the great Civil War to the literature which already exists, that the author has ventured to offer his book to the public. Though far from professing to be a complete history of the downfall of the military power of the Southern States, it aims at placing before the reader in manageable form an account of the principal events which brought it about."

Mr. Beebe, Curator of Ornithology of the New York Zoological Park, here records the experiences and observations of a trip across Mexico from Vera Cruz to the Pacific and back made during the winter of 1903-04. He and his wife roughed it, camping out with their guide and living in the saddle or on foot. Although birds were the author's chief interest he studied attentively the other forms of animal life about him. A concluding chapter by Mrs. Beebe gives hints for outfit, travelling, etc., and an appendix contains a list of the birds and mammals observed, with descriptive notes.

The author is professor of Hebrew in Auburn Theological Seminary. Essentially a restatement of the Christian tradition that was supreme fifty years ago, but a restatement with differences so numerous and important that it may be regarded by men who do not think things through as an attack on tradition. The author makes a search for truth without undue solicitude as to whether its results are orthodox. But he thinks his conclusions are the old orthodoxy transposed into the forms of modern thought. The work studies the prophets' messages as they relate to the coming Messiah.

In the nearly ten years that have elapsed since the appearance of the first edition of this little book, the newer and so-called bacterial processes of sewage treatment have been announced, passed through an experimental stage and come into extensive use. Meanwhile the author has improved many opportunities to visit American sewage purification works, old and new, and during 1904 spent several months abroad, chiefly in Great Britain, visiting sewage works. As a consequence, the section which deals with the purification of sewage has been largely rewritten and extended.

The real Roland and Oliver around whom medieval romance has woven so many wonderful legends are the leading characters in a story of the court of Charlemagne in the 8th century. The Danes and the Vikings in sea fights are the center of vivid descriptive scenes, while the court of Charlemagne, where gather many brilliant figures of Pagan and Christian is the background to tales of love and intrigue in which the figure of "the white Christ" and the influence of his beautiful teachings on the Norseman brought there, are picturesquely depicted. Charlemagne himself is an imposing figure, his personality pervading the story. The book is unusually rich in binding and printing. The pages are enclosed in a characteristic frame printed in a tint—and there is a frontispiece in colors. The title-page is in red and black.

A story of the occult. An Englishman and his daughter, both deeply interested in Eastern mysticism, are present one night at an incantation in which an Egyptian medium brings to life the spirit of the Englishman's dead wife. The apparition, at once recognizable, quickly changes to a creature of horrible features and the girl realizes that some evil spirit has entered into her. Her father dies from the shock of the apparition and the girl, haunted by this evil spirit, returns to London and soon becomes engaged to a sane, wholesome Englishman. Later she comes under the occult influence of a man whom she and her father had known in Egypt and whose part in her life is only terminated by tragic means.

This work, the last from Tissot's pencil, is one of great artistic importance. It is a beautifully made book, manufactured in this country, and is a fine example of color printing and black and white. The text of the larger part of the Old Testament is given in the present edition in English, while in others it is in French. The pictures are in full pages, and through the text, in rich colors and in black and white.

The little volume here presented is the result of a desire to provide students with the text of one of the gospels edited on the basis of classic Greek usage, with notes and vocabulary. The text is, with three or four slight alterations, that of Westcott and Hort. The notes are intended to explain the Greek without going further into exegesis; they contain references to the grammars of Goodwin and of Hadley and Allen.

This first volume of the "Life of Goethe" by the foremost authority of recent times was published in 1895. The author died in 1902. For the last ten years of his life the government relieved him of all his duties as Professor in the Berlin University in order that he might devote himself entirely to his great life of Goethe. A chronic illness had made it impossible for him to accomplish his regular work besides his great work of research. The second volume was finished by others and appeared in 1903. It is far larger than the first, and it was thought better to make the English translation in three volumes. All the verses quoted in book are given in German, but translations that have been furnished regard accuracy of thought beyond the highest literary finish. The translator is professor of German at the Leland Stanford University.

A Dorsetshire story full of the woods and a keeper's life. A rich farmer dying leaves his property to his wife for her life, stipulating that then it shall go intact to the oldest son who is to provide for his brother. The younger man is indignant, falls out with his brother and takes a place as keeper with an eccentric old woman devoted to the Kneipp cure. Romance steps in and the plot develops the young farmer whose wildest doings have stopped short of wild oats and are put down by a friend as "wild wheat."

Bonner, Geraldine. The pioneer: a tale of two states; il. by Harrison Fisher. Indianapolis, Ind., Bobbs-Merrill Co., [1905. Mr.] c. 7-392 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

Nevada and California in the early seventies supply the scenery for this realistic presentation of a drama of mining speculation and social unrest. The pioneer, whose only love had married his trusted friend twenty-one years before, meets her daughter at a ball and casually learns that her family are the squatters on his land, against whom he is about to institute suit. He learns the mother is dying and he spends his life in looking after the interests of her children. The two daughters go from a life of poverty and hard work to riches and social position and would have suffered much had it not been for the true devotion of the sturdy pioneer.

 A story of Northern Mississippi just before and during the Civil War. Begins with a scene of "underground railway" proselyting in which Northern missionary ministers try to stir up the slaves to leave their master. Serena is an ambitious girl of far more manly qualities than her twin brother. She is a typical Southern heroine and goes through great tribulation in her patriotic devotion to her less whole-souled relatives. The book is dramatic and the climax is a surprise.

- Braddon, M. E., [Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Maxwell.] The rose of life. N. Y., Brentano's, 1905. 4+352 p. D. cl., †$1.50.
 The scene shifts between London and the Riviera. A poet and his adoring wife, a woman of the world who later turns nun, a young girl rescued by the poet from a mother unfit to protect her, and the man she marries, are the six characters whose lives react upon one another and at times very unhappily. All turns out well, but the vain, lovable poet is sacrificed.
- Bradford, Amory Howe. The inward light. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1905. O.] c. 8+359 p. D. cl., $1.25 net.
 Series of essays on the Holy Spirit, the Inward Light which is in every man and is sufficient to disclose all the truth that is needed for the purpose of life. This light is from God who dwells in humanity as he is immanent in the universe; therefore the source of authority is to be found within the soul and not in external authority of church, or creed or book; and this light being divine must be continuous. Thus the author sums up the argument of the book which is not antagonistic to church or creed, but in a sense supplementary to them. Dr. Bradford is the pastor of the First Congregational Church in Montclair, N. J., and the author of various books on religion.

In the preparation of this essay Mr. Brady searched a great number of books and documents, published and unpublished. It covers one of the most interesting periods of Texan history beginning with the treaty of 1819 and closing with the compromise of 1850. The two parts into which it is divided are "Texas and its independence," and "The Mexican war and its consequences." Among its special subjects are General Sam Houston, the Alamo and Goliad, San Jacinto, Stephen F. Austin, causes of the Mexican war, Generals Taylor, Scott, etc.

A light romance of the time of Paul Jones. The scene is Paris and the hero goes through many surprising adventures. It is published in an elaborate gift-book dress and handsomely illustrated in two colors.

Brady, Rev. Cyrus Townsend. Three daughters of the Confederacy: the story of their loves and their hatreds, their joys and their sorrows, during many surprising adventures on land and sea; il. by J. N. Marchand. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham Co., [1905.] c. 2+440 p. D. cl., *$1.50.

The separate histories of three Southern girls in war-time. The adventures of one take place on the Atlantic Coast and the sea, and her lover is a sailor. The Mississippi River furnishes the background for the adventures of the second maiden, who marries in spite of herself a Yankee non-combatant from whom she flees, not to be won again till the fall of Vicksburg. The last of the trio has a lover who is a Southerner through and through and a captain of cavalry under Stonewall Jackson. While romance is the motif of these three stories, historical events play an important part.

Brady, Rev. Cyrus Townsend. The two captains: a romance of Bonaparte and Nelson. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. [Ja.] c. 15+413 p. D. cl., *$1.50.

A brilliantly told story of the early years of service of Nelson in the English navy and of Napoleon in the French army of the Republic. A noble French family flying from the guillotine is saved by one of Nelson's officers, Lieutenant Macartney, a dashing young Irishman, whose love for Louise de Vaudemont is the romance of the book. The history of the time with its many picturesque figures is the background to a tale of brave deeds.

Brady, Ja. Boyd. Beacon search-lights on pioneers and millionaires. Bost., Lewis N. Cushman, 1905. c. 23+313 p. O. cl. (Not for sale.)

Some months ago the New England Conference, realizing the urgency of the rescue of its superannuates, requested Bishop Goodsell, then presiding, to appoint one of its members to work out their deliverance. The bishop appointed the present writer, this volume being the result; its aim being to raise a permanent fund for the New England superannuates, through its arguments and prayers. It cries out bitterly against neglect, desertion, betrayal and ingratitude, especially against filial ingratitude and asks for fair play, for consideration for "the worst treated class of humanity."

The author is associate professor of Egyptology and Semitic languages in the University of Chicago. Entirely based on recent original research. A mission to the museums of Europe to collect their Egyptian monuments for a commission of the four Royal academies of Germany (Berlin, Leipzig, Goettingen and Munich) in order to make these documents available for a great Egyptian dictionary endowed by the German Emperor enabled the author to copy from the originals practically all the historical monuments of Egypt in Europe. And then he has spent years in Egypt in preparation. As an up-to-date criticism of works on Egypt the work is invaluable. Designed for layman as well as scholar.

Collection of letters written by or to Mr. William Henry Brookfield, the English clergyman, and his wife. They were friends of Thackeray, Tennyson, the Hallams, Carlyle, Edward Fitzgerald, Monckton Milnes, and others of the brilliant men and women of Mid-Victorian literary life. The majority of these letters, which have been collected by a son and daughter of the Brookfields, are written by either husband or wife, though there are many from Thackeray, who considered Brookfield as one of his two dearest friends. Mrs. Brookfield was the original of Lady Castlewood in "Henry Esmond."

Randy Weston has been the central figure of five previous books. In this, the sixth of the series, she is shown particularly in her contact with her young companions—her power of winning and holding friends being so marked, that the envious ones of the country village where her home is say that it is simply Randy's "luck" that so many are fond of her.

The fascinating star, "Mary Manton," and her charming young daughter occupy the centre of the stage in this story. The actress, who has accumulated wealth in her twenty years of stage life, is respected as well as admired, although known to have been divorced from her husband after a few years of married life. "Incompatibility" was the cause—her bohemian nature finding his rather severe conventional outlook upon life unendurable. The young daughter, loving her mother, still longs to know her father, and goes finally to his care—in a New York home of great luxury. The girl's love story, a long residence abroad, scenes from both professional and social life in New York, are described with earnestness and reality.

A new chapter deals with the special fitness of the oyster for gathering up the germs of cholera and typhoid fever and transmitting them to man. The increasing danger of the pollution of the oyster districts by sewage near growing towns and cities is clearly and logically stated and forms a notable addition to the present edition.

The Kloster was founded by Johann Conrad Beissel, in 1728, at Ephrata, a little German town about 18 miles from Reading, Pa., in the Valley of Cocalico, Lancaster County. In less than a decade after its founding it became a semi-monastic community, later it developed into a religious, educational, commercial and industrial settlement, and set up the third printing press in the colony. This press was the first to print English and German type in Colonial Pennsylvania. The brothers and sisters of the Kloster were celibates. Their religion as expounded by the mystic founder resembles the beliefs of the Seventh Day Baptists. The scenes and incidents supposed to have occurred in the early history of the settlement are interwoven in a romance.

The plot concerns few people. Malory Dwight, a fine specimen of country manhood in search of a nurse to tend his dying sister, meets Barbara, the heroine, escaping from a travelling circus where she has been a palmist and has done conjuring tricks for her adopted father. She wins the hearts of the most heterogeneous characters with most of whom religion is a very real thing. Barbara's reverent, religious mind and her old career as palmist war constantly and lead to many fine discussions with her neighbors. Several very amusing characters cheer the story.

The life of an inland American woman's college and its influence on the thoughts, character and emotions of its graduates is the background for the study of two half-sisters of totally different tastes. The older girl almost sacrifices her life to the younger, an irresponsible artist of uncontrolled emotions. The prejudice against men and the harsh judgment of them founded on total ignorance of the world and real life yields after long struggle to less morbid views and good common sense. New York City and a farm in Maine furnish the scenes of the later story of Giovanni Galeotti.

Browning, Rob. Select poems of Robert Browning arranged in chronological order; with biographical and literary notes by A. J. George. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1905. [O.] c. 37+417 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

The poems are arranged in chronological order; and the notes are biographical and literary, relating each poem to the events in the author's life out of which it grew, and to the characteristic forms of art in his own career and that of his great contemporaries, Wordsworth and Tennyson. This method of study has been tested for a long time by the editor in school and college classes, and with general readers, and has been found to be stimulating and rewarding. The only poems not given entire are "Pauline," "Paracelsus," and "Pippa passes."

Brudno, Ezra Selig. The little conscript: a tale of the reign of Nicholas I. N. Y., Doubleday, Page & Co., 1905. [Je.] c. 43+325 p. D. cl., *$1.50.

A story of the reign of Nicholas I., Emperor of Russia from 1825 to 1855. A Jewish boy of fifteen, a precocious student of the Talmud, is drafted for the army. Because he will not forswear his religion he is cruelly persecuted. Later he takes interest in military life and does much for his fellow soldiers. The conditions of the Jews in Russia are described with the same startling realism shown in the author's former story, "The Fugitive."

Brunbaugh, Martin Grove. The making of a teacher: a contribution to some phases of the problem of religious education. Phil., Sunday School Times Co., 1905. c. 15+351 p. O. cl., $1.

Much of the material embraced under the above title, appeared originally in a series of twenty-five articles in the Sunday School Times. Some additional matter has been added, and the whole carefully revised and moulded together. According to the introduction, "this volume does not aim to present an exhaustive analysis of the factors involved in the making of a teacher. It does, however, undertake to lay before the minds of sincere students many of the cardinal guidances to that end. In the light of our needs to-day, it presents what seem to be the most needed elements of guidance."

"The scarlet patch" was the badge of a Tory organization, and a loyal patriot boy, Donald Bastien, is dismayed at learning that his uncle, with whom he is a "bound boy," is secretly connected with this treacherous band. Thrilling scenes follow in which a faithful Indian figures prominently, and there is a vivid presentation of the school and home life and the public affairs of Revolutionary times.

"After the play of 'A little princess' was produced in New York and so many children went to see it and liked Becky and Lottie and Melchisedec, my publishers asked me if I could not write Sara's story over again and put into it all the things and people who had been left out before, and so I have done it and when I began I found there were actually pages and pages of things which had happened that had never been put even into the play. So in this 'Little princess,' I have put in all that I have been able to discover."—The Preface.

In each chapter two artists are compared to contrast their motives and methods. This comparison gives the history of the times the artists lived; a short biography of each artist; the influences which helped to shape him and his special point of view; the method of his technique as illustrated in the examples selected. Twenty-eight double insets, full-page reproductions of notable paintings and a complete glossary of technical terms and a good index give the book value as a work of reference. There is also a parallel chronology of the painters included and a bibliography of works of art readily procurable.

Caffyn, Mrs. Kathleen Mannington, ["Iota," pseud.] Patricia: a mother. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. [S.] 2+368 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

Study of mother love—one woman blind adoring, idealizing; the other, forgiving, comprehending and unselfish, Patricia, an Australian girl, brimming over with vitality, beautiful and trusting, has married an Englishman of irreproachable character and many acres. Years later she finds out he has deeply wronged her; yet to spare his mother, she keeps silent even after her husband's death and the reading of his iniquitous will wherein he protects himself at his wife's expense. But Patricia also has an only son and it is her effort to gain his love and confidence, and at the same time keep peace with her saintly though misjudging mother-in-law, that the story records. County neighbors play an important part in the history.

While the writer, a portrait painter, was visiting in Shanghai in 1903, she received an order to paint the portrait of the Empress Dowager. It was a great innovation in Chinese customs for an imperial portrait to be painted, but this picture was wanted for the St. Louis Exhibition. The artist went to Peking and in the end made four portraits of her majesty. The months thus consumed were spent in the various palaces of China and the author had unusual opportunities to study Chinese conditions at first hand such as are afforded to few. She describes the Dowager Empress as one of the most interesting and important figures in modern history. The minute details of Chinese court etiquette is very well described.

The author of "The shadow of the czar" gives in "The weird picture" a strange and startling story. A wedding about to take place in the opening chapter waits indefinitely for the bridegroom, who never puts in an appearance. His brother, who was to have been his best man, is also in love with the girl to be married. The explanation of the brother's disappearance takes up the whole of the book and proves to be both remarkable and tragical. An insane Italian artist is the chief actor in a shocking murder, made "for art's sake."

The existence of Evil upon the earth has occupied the attention of men in all ages and has been considered a mystery of mysteries. The author traces the introduction of Evil as the direct and necessary result of the principle of Self-Preservation implanted in man. He has to fight the two facts of Death and the tendency of animals to devour one another. The study of the motives of man in his life in the world is intricate. The outcome of the author's theories is that man is wholly responsible for his actions and his happiness on earth.

Another of the author's love tales of the time of the Georges, picturing the gay life of London, its gaming, its routs, its intrigues, its artificialities. Lady Anne, "French Nan," as she is called, is married in haste to an English country squire, with whom she finds life a very dull affair. Yet after her various tantrums, she is surprised by her husband's willing consent to her visiting in London her friend Kitty Bellairs, now the Lady Kilcroney. How the rebellious wife disports herself in society, how she and Kitty fall out, how the country husband resorts to subterfuge to win back his errant wife, is told in true comedy style.

A story of northern India, the leading characters being the Lieutenant-Governor of the province, his wife and niece, two English officers, and a French physician. The Governor's wife is the "Rose of the world," a beautiful, enigmatical woman, whose odd story is cleverly evolved by quite original methods, holding the reader in suspense to the very end. The governor is the lady's second husband, her first husband, Captain English, having been reported slain in a battle with the natives some years before the story opens. The story brings all the characters together in the end, in an old haunted English manor-house.

A little girl, Nellie Ross, is left quite alone in the world in the tenement house district of New York. The first gleam of better things comes into her life in the form of a "Vacation School," where a kind lady very sensibly teaches practical house-keeping. Little Nellie's skill and general air of refinement win a home for her after the family who have been caring for her have gone from New York. Nellie has some trying times with the spoiled children of her benefactors, but a wonderful change comes during a trip abroad.

A love-story of "smart" people. The scene is laid at Miramas, a country house on the California coast near San Francisco. There is a young composer well-bred but hopelessly poor; the beautiful Mrs. Essington, a widow, youthful, but some ten years his senior, has centered her interests on his promising career. At the opening of the story his gratitude has deepened into an adoring affection, and Mrs. Essington is brought face to face with the problem that one day she will be an old woman while the man is yet in his prime. Then the other woman comes on the scene.

Chambers, Rob. W. Iole. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. [My26.] c. 13+142 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Iole was one of eight daughters of a devotee of "l'art nouveau" in painting, poetry, book-binding, music, etc. They were all named for butterflies. They joked in Greek and Latin; knew all the "ologies" and lived a happy outdoor life clothed in pajamas and bloomers. Poverty drove the poet to a New York rural spot where two of his girls were loved at first sight. The rich young men brought the whole family to New York City and three more girls found husbands at once. The travesty on the visionary poets and artists of the day with whom the vocabulary makes up for thought and work is delightfully humorous.

Chambers, Rob. W. The reckoning. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. [S.] c. 20+386 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The fourth of the series of novels devoted to the history of the old New York frontier in the days of the American war for Independence. The third story is not yet published. For notice of first, "Cardigan," see American Catalog, '01; for second, "Maid at arms," '04. The hero of this story is a spy in New York risking a traitor's dishonorable death for the cause. He is discovered by a man bent on seeing General Clinton to submit a plan for the defeat of Washington, but a woman stands between them and he is given a chance of flight. The story is strikingly romantic but rests upon historic facts.

A young actress goes to the Azores Islands in search of health. Her descriptions of scenery and humorous thoughts and fancies are set down in letters to a friend in London. Lady Bobs, a most energetic lady, appears in the Azores; later also her brother who has before had much to do with the actress's need of rest. But amidst the nine beautiful islands "her brother and I" reach a better understanding.

While there is no dearth of good natural histories, they are all voluminous, usually consisting of six or ten bulky volumes, and are published at prices prohibitive to many purses, especially those of young folks. Many of these publications are admirable, others again are padded with much that is utterly useless to the general reader. The present work is an attempt then to fill what seems to the author a vacant place among books relating to natural history; for it includes in a single compact volume, at a moderate price, an outline of the entire animal kingdom, from the largest mammal down to the tiniest insect that has to be studied under a magnifying glass.

A notice setting forth the general purpose of this new history of the United States will be found in American Catalog, '04, under the first part of the work. This, Part 2, "furnishes an extended study of the negro population during the later colonial period, systematic accounts of the development of each of the several colonies, and an exposition of the distinctions to be drawn between the revolution in the minds of men that resulted in rejection of English control and the war itself that followed the revolution and resulted in national independence." The volume covers in general, the so-called "neglected period" from 1700 to 1760, and the period of radical agitation from 1761 to 1774. It brings together the results of recent investigations by the authors themselves and by other students of American history.

It is evident that a physician has abundant opportunities for forming judgment upon many of life's problems, since he comes in contact with all classes of humanity. Dr. Chapin, a New York physician of wide reputation, here discusses some of the vital questions of society and the individual. Inequality, mental and physical, the unfit, the child, poverty, health, education, happiness, success, religion, are some of the topics treated in a scientific, broad minded and helpful manner.

Baranof was the first governor of Russian America, in the 18th century, the time of this story. In one of the settlements of Russians and Indians planted by him, a sincere and poetical love story is developed. The surroundings are new and little known and carefully studied. The characters besides Baranof—a strong portrait of a rough individuality—comprise a Russian priest of childlike nobility, a young Russian girl, who has come out to the settlement, to join her betrothed, whom she has not seen for several years, and finds him in love with another woman. A man who has made the voyage over with her tells the story, and of his determination to win her if he can.

Vivid pictures are embraced in this diary of the social life of the South that went on uninterruptedly in the midst of the Civil War; of the economic conditions that resulted from blockaded ports; of the inanner in which the spirits of the people rose and fell with each victory or defeat and of the events that took place in Charleston, Montgomery, and Richmond. Mrs. Chesnut had lived forty years previous to the breaking out of the war, and was perfectly familiar with the controversies that led to it. She met and entertained all the Southern leaders, and entered in her journal from day to day her frank impression of them. It will be seen the work is of more than usual interest.

The colonel's "dream" was to return to the South, to his childhood's home, and live among old friends, helping them with his money and with his experience. He had been in the Southern army, but came north at the close of the war, making a fortune there. The time is in the early '90's, Colonel Henry French, not yet an old man, and still a very attractive one, just having retired from business. He goes South, to the small town, where he was born, and spends several months there. At first he is charmed with the cordiality and hospitality extended to him, and the quiet, simple life. By degrees his eyes are opened, through both dramatic and amusing experiences, to the true condition of the South, the backwardness of its people in thought and action, etc. His "dream" has a sudden and unexpected ending.

The author presents Christianity as an original or new religion adapted to all mankind. He points out that it is new in promising forgiveness of sin and eternal life, in teaching the fatherhood of God, in being positive, and original in that it is missionary. All cases of pardon in the New Testament are reviewed. The important province of miracles, prayer, and pardon in religion is fully discussed. The theory is advanced that the Church of Christ is a complete organization, its officers being divinely appointed. It consequently excludes all other churches, whether ancient or modern, as not sanctioned by inspiration.

She was a young girl living a peaceful life in central Pennsylvania and almost betrothed to a lifelong friend when, at the beginning of the Civil War, a young Southerner from Maryland came on a visit to her village. He won her heart and she loved him even when he confessed he was married. The story tells of the earnest self-sacrificing friendship of her childhood's friend by whom she was saved from her own heart and protected through many dangers. In the dreadful battle-summer of 1862 occurs the climax of the plot.

Author is associate professor of plant physiology in the University of Nebraska. "The present volume is intended as a handbook for investigators and for advanced students of ecology, and not as a textbook of the subject. An elementary text-book covering the same field, but adapted to the needs of undergraduate students, is in preparation. The handbook is essentially an account of the methods used by the author in his studies of the last eight years, during which a serious attempt has been made to discover and to correlate the fundamental points of view in the vast field of vegetation. No endeavor is made to treat any portion of the subject exhaustively, since a discussion of general methods and general principles is of much greater value in the present condition of ecology."—Preface. The fern allies, by reason of their curious forms and often great abundance, seldom fail to attract the attention of the student of plants, but their identification has always proved more or less of a puzzle to beginners. Like the ferns, they bear neither flowers nor seeds, and at first glance seem to offer few points by which they may be distinguished. The species are usually included in botanical manuals, but the necessary brief and technical descriptions have tended to discourage rather than to aid the novice. In reality, however, most of the species are easily identified, and it is one of the purposes of this book to point out how this may be done.—Preface.

The author is professor of Political Economy in the University of Wisconsin. The book does for the problems of labor what Ripley's "Trusts, pools and corporations" has done for the problems of capital. From it one can gain an intelligent and accurate explanation of contemporary problems as well as a progressive history of the whole subject.

Prepared especially to meet the needs of the beginner in bee-keeping. The work is not intended to be a complete treatise for the professional apiarist, but rather a handbook for those who would keep bees "for happiness and honey and incidentally for money." The author hopes that it will also serve as an introduction to the more extended manuals already in the field. The information it offers has been gained in practical experience in a small apiary.

A story of adventure by sea off the Georgia coast. On Dafuskie Island are tall saplings used for poles for dredges. There is a fortune to be made in these and rival enterprises are started to secure it. First there is the struggle for the contract to furnish poles and then the far more exciting struggle to get them on the rafts and safely delivered. Scenes of great danger and much fighting with fists and firearms make a fascinating story.

As in his previous work on "Old Touraine," the author has here written not only a history of Provence, but also a descriptive account of its towns and antiquities with their legendary and romantic associations. The first volume is "devoted to the Phœnicians, Greeks and Romans who have left traces upon the soil of France that are as remarkable as any to be found in Italy;" the second brings the story of Provence through the transition period to the year 1484 when Provence, ceasing to be an independent kingdom, was ceded to France.

"The consumer is between the upper and the nether millstone." This is the motto printed on the cover of this study of the economic future of this country and the world at large. The consumer, says Mr. Cooper, is ground between labor and capital when they disagree, between overproduction and the present-day efforts to control it when it is too late, between competition and its restraint by trusts, which, he holds, are but a means to an end, as feudalism was a means to reach monarchy, and monarchy a necessary step toward the rule of the people. What this author seeks is the organization of the consumer, as capital has already been organized and labor.

La Gran Quibira, the scene of the fanciful novel, was, according to the traditions of the North American Indians, the principal city of the Cibola (a group of seven cities), occupied in 1539 by the Zunis. The remarkable history of the ruins of La Gran Quibira, lost for a time, later occupied by Franciscan monks, lost again and rediscovered by Lewis and Clark, is told by the author in her efforts to supply the connecting link in Aztec history. The incidents are unusual and tragic. The characters are some real, others mythical. The writer's home was built on a government claim believed to be the site of the buried city.

Story of the Carlist uprising in Spain in 1835, relating the experiences of a young Scot with the British Legion. He and his friend, an intrepid Englishman, take part in the various engagements before and after the relief of Bilbao, and are themselves taken prisoners in their efforts to rescue two Spanish ladies and an English girl who have been kidnapped by the brigands. A double thread of romance adds interest to their perils and escapes.

- Fair Margaret is studying singing in Paris at the age of twenty-two. She lives at Versailles with an American countrywoman of the old school. Margaret is told by a great singer that she has a marvellous voice and an engagement is secured. She is booked to begin her career with "Faust," but later this is changed to "Rigoletto." The plot hinges on the last act when the "sack scene" is to be given. Two men play a part in Margaret's life. She flirts desperately with both. The end points to a continuation. The life of singers and the nature of artists are skillfully drawn.

A romance founded on history with the action taking place mostly in Scotland during the fifteenth century when the conflict between the Stuarts and Douglases was at its fiercest. Margaret Douglas, the last of her line, was betrothed to her cousin, sixth Earl of Douglas, whom she marries though loving his next younger brother. For ten years she is nominally his wife according to an agreement made between the brothers, and when William is treacherously killed by King James II. of Scotland, Margaret and his brother are married. Too late the girl realizes the mistake she has made; and it is only after bitter suffering and many perils that she gains true happiness in becoming the wife of the man who has faithfully loved and served her since childhood.

The adventures of two boys and a girl in a picturesque spot on the Scottish coast. Sir Toady Crusoe, the irrepressible, incorrigible, lovable youngster who figured in "Sir Toady Lion," again leads others into mischief and resourcefully extricates them. He and Dinky go off on an expedition to rescue the girl who has run away from home. They have amazing experiences on a light-house island, and at length return home so that Toady may act as go-between and matchmaker for his older brother who is grievously in love.

Army, corps of engineers, and is also a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, accomplished this journey in the latter half of 1903, in the company of a French army officer. They travelled from the Caspian Sea east through Russian and Chinese Turkestan to the Tibetan plateau; thence to Bombay. Unhampered by any political obligations, Mr. Crosby could examine and judge the conflicting influences at work in this part of Asia. This volume is not a transcript of a journal, but the summing up of experiences and observations. He made a special study of the effect of climate and religion upon human society. Author is Professor of Systematic Theology in the Drew Theological Seminary. He says in his preface: "Neither in claim nor in spirit is this book dogmatic. As indicated in several ways by the book itself, there is no attempt to speak the final word. no aim to be, or to become, 'the recognized authority' of any church, or of any school, or of any man. After years of preparatory waiting I have, I believe, caught an important vision of the Christian faith as an organic whole of doctrine, and I am eager to help other men to catch the same vision. In reading the book, many peculiarities of scheme and method will be discovered; but the main clue to all can be found in one thing, namely, in the junction of the two ideas, personal responsibility and racial solidarity. . . . In this peculiar junction there may be, I sometimes hope, a fair mediation between Arminianism and Calvinism."

'Polo, Past and Present' covers very much ground not occupied by existing books on the game, and is written from a somewhat different point of view. In the chapter on ancient polo, I have gone back to the authorities as far as they were known to me, and have made an endeavor to recover from the past the rules and methods of the game. The commentaries on the rules of polo of England, America, India, and New South Wales will, it is hoped, show that these rules are based on common principles, and in what way they vary to meet the necessities of the game in different countries."—Author's Preface.

This work is the fruit of studies pursued and judgments formed during eleven years of service as Professor of Homiletics in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, at Louisville, Kentucky. The writer was a student of the late Dr. John A. Broadus, the first incumbent of the chair, and it was through him that he became so deeply interested in the historical part of the course in homiletics. This is the first of three proposed books. The next will treat of European preaching, and the last will present a history of preaching in the United States.

This sect believes that Christ will appear again on earth and that only those holding the tenets of this sect will be saved. A preacher of the sect, a man of great personal magnetism converts the father of a little family living a serene life in a pretty New York town. He dies shortly after, but has made promises to the Adventist that completely change the future of his household. The moral inculcated by a pretty story is that the foundation of all religious systems is love and that noble lives are best preachers of every doctrine.

An old Japanese nobleman lost his income when the government paid up its bonds and could not reinvest to advantage. His neighbor, a commoner and business man started a military school in which the old soldier nobleman could teach. At the emperor's wish all duty became a pleasure to him. The younger generation of both houses had various heart-burnings regarding rank and new methods of life in Japan. The Russian-Japanese war just ended made heroes of the sons of nobleman and commoner, and the nobleman's daughter finally makes all about her happy.

Deeping, G: Warwick. The slanderers. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [F.] c. 3+384 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

The author follows his original Arthurian romance of "Uther and Igraine" with a novel of provincial England of to-day. A young idealist whose father is striving to make him a force in native politics is coaxed into marriage by a common- place flirt who soon seeks her pleasures elsewhere. He meets an unsophisticated poetic girl and their sympathies tend to make them both purer and better. But the village slanderers go near to ruining a wholly ideal companionship. The descriptions of nature and natural emotions are true and poetic.

Dickberry, F., [pseud. for Mmc. F. Blaze de Bury.] The storm of London: a social rhapsody. Bost., Herbert B. Turner & Co., 1905. 4-314 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The thought is from Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus" that individuality and distinction rests in clothes. A great storm is supposed to sweep over present-day political and social London which carries off all clothes, furniture, etc. and thus removes all social distinctions and all recognition of friends and acquaintances. The author is acute and scathing in his remarks on the falseness, superficiality and heartlessness of present day society. A very aristocratic earl and a typical modern woman are chief speakers and point the moral at the end of this dream.

First published by Charles Scribner's Sons in 1896 in their University extension series. Intended "to serve as a general introduction to Greek literature and thought, for those primarily, who do not know Greek." The author has, therefore, tried to give, with the help of quotations from the original authors some idea of the Greek view of religion, of the state, of the individual and of art.

Dickinson, Goldsworthy Lowes. A modern symposium. N. Y., McClure, Phillips & Co., 1905. [O.] c. 6+160 p. D. cl., $1 net.

The author sketches the different view points of life of a Tory, a Liberal, a Conservative, a socialist, an anarchist, a professor, a man of science, a journalist, a man of business, a poet, a gentleman of leisure, a member of the Society of Friends, and of a man of letters. These different people all belong to a club called "The Seekers" and make week-end visits to each other's houses where the host is always chairman. Every man tries to make his theories clear to his associates and the various theories of life are made vital for character and life by the different speakers. By the author of "Letters from a Chinese official" published anonymously.

Dickson, Harris. Duke of Devil-May-Care. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. [S.] c. 5+295 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Noel Duke inherited a plantation in the delta of the Mississippi which he managed with great success, and with such liberality in all things towards whites and negroes that it gained the name of Devil-May-Care. He fell in love and his affections and a cock-fight took him to New Orleans just before the Mardi Gras festivities of 1898. He got into unexpected difficulties, was suspected of murder and a hustling detective story led to his final happiness.

The Ravanel were Southern people, whose men had fought for the Confederacy. The reader is introduced to them in their home near Natchez on the borders of the Mississippi in the terrible days of Reconstruction. Mayor Stephen Ravanel is taken from his wife and little children by the hand of a murderer and political foe. His boy Stephen, then a mere child is brought up by his aunt, with the ever constant thought that he must revenge his father's death. Stephen's opportunity comes when a man grown, and how he makes use of it is very dramatic and thrilling. His love story is sweet and tender.

Dix, Beulah Marie. The fair maid of Graystones. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. [S.] c. 5+351 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author's knowledge of the stress of the time of the Cavaliers and Roundheads is again shown in this story that is laid in a great country house called Graystones, situated in Suffolkshire, England. The time is 1648 just after the surrender of the Cavalier stronghold of Colchester to the Parliamentary forces. The hero is Cavalier, the maiden Roundhead. The form of fiction makes attractive the thoroughly authentic history.

The dramatic and sensational story of "Genevieve de Brabant" is told for the evident purpose of proving that retribution is a powerful force in human life. Genevieve was reared in simplicity in southern France, her life therefore was uneventful until she was brought into association, in Paris, with a man who enacts the part of villain in her remarkable history. The scenes are varied.

thur I. Keller. N. Y., Doubleday, Page & Co., 1905. c. 9+374 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The clansman is second in succession of a series of novels which deal with the Reconstruction period in the South. In his latest story Mr. Dixon pictures the condition of the South after Lee's surrender, dwelling particularly on the stand taken by Thaddeus Stevens against President Andrew Johnson which led to his impeachment. He also endeavors to prove that Lincoln's assassination was a great blow to the South, and that Andrew Johnson's efforts for peaceful Reconstruction were frustrated by the partisanship of this great Republican fanatic. Many real personages are introduced and there is a romance interwoven with the historic incident.

The author of "The leopard's spots" and "The clansman" has written his personal experiences in search of a home where life would be worth living. He moved twelve times in New York City until he had had enough. Then with a wife and three children he went to the wilds of Virginia and found life worth living. By word and pictures taken by himself he shows the pastimes and enjoyments of country life.

The first chapters contain a discussion of the Westminster Confession of Faith of the Established Church of Scotland, or the United Presbyterian Church, and of the Creeds and Thirty-nine Articles of the Established Church of England, with the moral and religious aspects of compulsory subscription thereto. All this is introductory to an account of the recent litigation arising from the wish of the Free Church of Scotland to unite with the United Presbyterian Church, merging their funds and activities. The author outlines the arguments advanced in the succeeding appeals of the case and practically summarizes the points of religious controversy between the Scottish churches and their attitude towards disestablishment. As Dr. Donaldson is principal of the University of St. Andrews his work may be considered authoritative.

This little girl went from Maine to San Francisco more than fifty years ago. The city then was primitive enough, but even in her short life there she saw it grow to something like its present proportions. Laverne Westbury has a checkered life. Left an orphan when scarcely more than a child, she is adopted by an old friend of her mother's and taken to California. After some years her father, whom she thought dead, discovers her. He has made a fortune and married again, and carries Laverne to London, where she narrowly escapes marrying a lord.

Life of the great Pope, born about 546, of a noble Roman family. He was "for many years the foremost personage in Europe, and did more, perhaps, than any other single man to shape the course of European development." Strange as it may seem, inasmuch as Pope Gregory was the means of introducing Christianity among the English, no comprehensive biography of him, in English, has appeared until the present work. The author, who is a Fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, has divided his two-volume work into three sections, the first two dealing with the history of Gregory, the third exclusively with his theology. A full general index, an index of Gregory's life, work and doctrines, and a table of dates complete the volumes.

A story of school life and football. The young hero is a typical American boy, who has lived abroad with his parents for several years, and while proficient in modern languages, is almost entirely ignorant of the classics. His place in the school he enters, therefore, brings him into contact with both the upper and lower classes, and he makes odd friendships. The broadening of his character under his experiences with his schoolmates is well illustrated. The leading arguments for and against football are introduced.

Doctor Wilfred T. Grenfell is a young Englishman who practises medicine on the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador. He finds his only compensation in the gratitude and love of the people. He is a member of the Royal National Mission to Deep-Sea Fishermen; the purpose of this book being to spread the knowledge of his work, and to describe the character and condition of the folk whom he seeks to help. The book is one of facts, well worth reading, with a wealth of anecdote obtained at first hand.

Eggleston, G: Cary. A daughter of the South: a war's-end romance; il. by E. Pollak. Bost., Lothrop Publishing Co., [1905. Ag.] c. 403 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A romance of the last months of the Civil War, when the Mississippi was again opened to navigation. A refugee Southern girl whose family have all perished in the war and who is herself reduced to the verge of starvation is rescued by a young Kentuckian, engaged in buying cotton along the river banks. He conveys her on his steamboat to his sister's home in Cairo, Illinois, and thereafter is the means of uniting her with her only surviving brother, for all of which he receives his reward. There are descriptions of lawless speculators and plundering merchants, who made the most out of the United States government and the ruined Southerners.

"Deerfoot, the Shawano," whom the boys learned to love through the Log Cabin and Deerfoot Series, is again brought to the fore, though he shuffled off the mortal coil in the final volume of the Deerfoot series. This new Deerfoot series, chronologically precedes the old Deerfoot series. The time as in the other books is when Lewis and Clark and their little band of devoted followers, journeyed through the wilderness and prairies from the Ohio to the Pacific. George and Victor our old friends again appear.

This the third and last volume of the New Deerfoot Series follows the adventures of the Indian guide and his two boy friends from the Pacific Ocean to their home in Ohio. The party makes the hazardous ascent of the Columbia River, and arrives among the Nez Perces Indians. Here they learn that Deerfoot's wonderful horse, Whirlwind, has been stolen by the Assiniboines, and the dauntless youth starts singlehanded on foot to overtake and recapture him. A thrilling encounter with five warriors is the result.

Ellis, J: Breckenridge. Stork's Nest; il. by Elizabeth Ingham. N. Y., Moffat, Yard & Co., 1905. [O.] c. 5+375 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

The backwoods of northern Missouri is the scene of this study of illiterate, narrow-minded country people. Two brothers, Abijah and Silas Stork, cruel, miserly, unscrupulous men, are secretly engaged in counterfeiting. Their evil practices are discovered by a wideawake young city fellow who has come to work on their farm for the sake of outdoor life, and he makes it his duty to bring them to justice and, at the same time, to protect a beautiful native girl who has been inveigled into a promise of marriage with one of them. The lighter parts of the story describe the education of this Emmy and her gradual awakening to what is noble and beautiful. There is also an account of a thrilling voyage on an uprooted tree down a flooded river. Much of the conversation is in broadest dialect.

A critical and historical study of the career of Napoleon Buonaparte, made for the purpose of sifting the facts; also of dissipating the myths that have been credited by biographers of Napoleon I. as real incidents. In an endeavor to find Buonaparte's level, Mr. Evans compares what he believes to be popular misapprehensions and depicts the little Frenchman as an admixture of madman, criminal and genius. Includes besides Dr. Carus' introduction, giving comparisons and quoting as confirmatory evidence Whately's pamphlet of 1819, denying the existence of Napoleon, a satire by Pères, also on the non-existence of Buonaparte, published in 1827.

Dr. Evans was the celebrated American dentist who lived in Paris from 1847 until his death in 1897, and was appointed court dentist by Napoleon III. His personal friendship with Napoleon and the Empress Eugénie brought him in contact with all the great ones of the time, not only of France but of other European countries. This volume is made up of those portions of his memoirs that relate to the Second French Empire, and contains a detailed account of Eugénie's flight from Paris under the care of Dr. Evans and Dr. Crane, the editor of the present work, and her subsequent settling in England. Dr. Evans's relations to the royal family continued up to his death and his record of men and events have the merit of being that of an eye witness and most loyal friend.

"Patelin" belongs to a series of farces which had come mysteriously into being as early as 1277. It is a piece of literature typical of the times—its author's name, however, being entirely forgotten. Mr. Holbrook in his introduction says: "In every regard it excels all other extant farces. The author of this piece, whoever he may have been and wherever he may have lived, was a genius, and when he wrote he was inspired." Of the characters he says: "They represent in several distinct and ludicrous phases the poverty, the greed, the cynical cunning, the selfishness, and the grinning depravity characteristic of the fifteenth century, at least in France."

The author is master of History and English Literature at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H. He has spent much of his leisure for several years at Versailles and Paris gathering facts and also draws largely from Saint Simon's monumental work on Louis XIV. He divides his work into 4 parts: The palace, the park, the king and the court. Mr. Farmer gives a wealth of statistical information on how the king first thought of building Versailles, who was the architect, how many soldiers constituted the palace guards, who might sit in the king's presence and other information on the customs and manners in the most corrupt and most conventional court of history, that seldom finds its way into descriptive works. Richly manufactured and illustrated.

"In the following chapters, my object has been to tell the story of the life and times of Constantine the Great. Whether he deserves the epithet my readers will judge for themselves, certainly his place in the select list of the immortals is not among the highest. But whether he himself was 'great' or not, under his auspices one of the most momentous changes in the history of the world was accomplished and it is the first conversion of a Roman Emperor to Christianity, with all that such conversion entailed, which makes his period so important and so well worth studying."—Author's Preface.

There is a love-lorn six-footer, the proprietor of a mushroom farm in the caves of Kentucky; there is a girl, rich, beautiful as Venus, and as unsophisticated as a backwoods child. Then there are moonshiners, several stray foreigners, married or otherwise; and a dashing New York girl who is engaged as a companion to train the Venus. These are the dramatis personae of an extravaganza in which a clandestine correspondence and several cases of mistaken identity serve to complicate matters.

"This work is the outgrowth of a statistical study of removal from office begun in the Seminary of American History and Institutions at Harvard University. The results of this preliminary study were published in the Annual Report of the American Historical Association for 1899. The interest thus aroused led to a broader investigation, which has been continued for about five years. . . . The subject which the book attempts to treat defies concise definition. . . . The leading words of the title limit each other; it is a history of the civil service from the standpoint of the patronage, and of the patronage with regard solely to the public offices."—Preface.

Under an executive order, issued by the President March 9, 1903, the papers of James Monroe were transferred from the Department of State to the Library of Congress. These papers had been purchased by an act of Congress, approved March 3, 1849. In 1893 the Department of State issued a calendar of them, the arrangement of which was alphabetical, the letters of Monroe being calendared separately from those of his correspondents. This alphabetical arrangement is convenient for determining the letters written by any one man; for historical purposes chronological arrangement is better, hence, this list is prepared to be used in State.

Forman, Justus Miles. The Island of Enchantment; il. by Howard Pyle. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [S.] c. 5+106 p. O. cl., †$1.75.

Romantic episode in venetian history. When the Huns appeared before Venice, in 1335, bent on pillage and conquest, a young nobleman was dispatched in command of three galleys to drive out the invaders from the neighboring island of Arbe. Landed on the island a prisoner, a young girl was brought before him and acknowledged herself to be the hated Princess Yaga, the leader of the Huns. But both man and girl immediately developed an all-consuming love for each other, which involved them in a series of surprising adventures leading to a wholly unexpected climax. The book is embellished by full-page colored illustrations, and there are decorations in tint on each page, and artistic binding.

There were two Tommy Carterets, father and son—the first a charming old fellow past sixty, who is loved by everyone in spite of his weak character and moral obliquity; the second a fine manly fellow of many virtues. Old Tommy's intrigue with a married woman is discovered by the injured husband, who, however, believes from his wife's concession that she refers to the son, who accepts the punishment that should have gone to his father, though just engaged to a lovely girl. He is sent away into exile to end his life in a desolate part of the country. Here he has remarkable adventures in which a woman figures.

"I have chosen the title, 'Canada as it is,' for three reasons. Firstly, because the popular idea about the great Dominion is that it is a region clasped most of the year in ice and frost, which it is not; secondly, because the Canadians themselves, by means of government pamphlets and subsidised lecturers, would like the world to believe it the most delightful land to live in, which it isn't; and thirdly, because Canada has just emerged from its adolescence as a nation, has reached lusty manhood, and has become conscious of the great rôle it may play in the history of commerce."—Author's Foreword.

A Japanese idyll. Himé, a shell-gatherer, child of the open air and the sea, knowing nothing of sorrow and responsibility save the care of her old foster mother, sees a handsome foreigner rowing towards the shore on a moonlight night. He is singing and unconsciously her voice answers his; and thus they are brought together. The stranger is Charles Barrington, an Englishman, travelling in Japan. Later it is discovered that Himé is the deserted daughter of an Englishman and his Japanese wife, and, yet more wonderful, that her father is the uncle of Charles Barrington; so all is made smooth for the happy ending of her love story as well as that of Barrington's Japanese tutor.

A story of every-day life in a New Jersey village. The Carrols, an impoverished, easy-going Southern family, have lately arrived and get all they want, living wholly on credit. The chief "debtor" is the handsome father who knows nothing with which to earn a penny except a song and dance learned from an old darkey. Unknown to his family, he often disappears "on business," and always brings home a little much-needed money. How it all turns out is too good to tell. The love of one of his daughters saves the father and she is at last provided for by a tradesman on whom the family has looked down.

- Fremssen, Gustav. Jörn Uhl; tr. by F. S. Delmer. Bost., Dana Estes & Co., 1905. c. 5-416 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.
Jörn Uhl was published in Germany in 1902. Its author, a clergyman of Schleswig-Holstein, suddenly found himself famous and has now retired to a literary life. It is the soul history of a peasant whose relations, through dissolute and extravagant lives, have squandered what their ancestors had accumulated by hard, self-sacrificing toil. After seeing his young wife die of want, Jörn went to his maternal uncle, a delightful character, and here he proves that "life is long enough to make one's self into something if one only has faith enough and a sturdy will." The book contains a fine description of the battle of Gravelotte. The manner is discursive and crude, but the material fine. The translation is remarkably good.

Fuller, Rob. Higgins. The golden hope: a story of the time of King Alexander the Great. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. c. 7+402 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

The wars and conquests of the Macedonian King form a stirring background to a series of pictures of the life of the time, historically accurate, and presented with a special charm of style. The love story tells of the separation of Clearchus, a young Athenian, from Artemesia, his betrothed, on the eve of their wedding, through the machinations of a relative who desires to obtain possession of Clearchus's fortune. Clearchus with two friends, a Theban and a Spartan, go in search of Artemesia, are involved in Alexander's campaigns and have as many adventures as Dumas' immortal guardsmen.

From 1194 till 1266 the German dynasty of Hohenstaufen oppressed Sicily. The historic events of this period, the death of a great pope and the final overthrow of the dynasty are mirrored in a love-tale of many trials. The Provençals of France hit the final blow, which ten years later was avenged in the extermination of every Frenchman on the island. Many battles and the great valor and devotion of women make stirring chapters.

A reprint of a rare pamphlet, loaned by the Dedham Historical Society. The address, which was delivered in many New England towns by Mrs. Gannett in 1802, tells of her experience as a soldier of the American Revolution. Under the name of Robert Shurtleff, she enlisted in the Continental army, served in the 4th Mass. Regiment, was wounded in an engagement at Tarrytown, N. Y., and was honorably discharged in the fall of 1783. In recognition of her military service, the Massachusetts Legislature granted her a pension.

Gardenhire, S. Major. The silence of Mrs. Harrold. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [Ja.] c. 6+462 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A prominent New York lawyer meets a beautiful woman on an ocean steamer returning to New York. He woos and wins her—but under a condition that he will never in any way seek to penetrate the mystery of her past. Their married life in New York City is for seven years an ideal one, when John Harrold's long sleeping desire to know something of his wife's early life is rudely awakened. A story follows, of ingenious construction, which gradually unravels an unusual plot. The characters are men and women of to-day—millionaires, actors and a charming actress, business men, lawyers, etc. The Theatrical Trust plays no small part in the story.

Study of schoolgirl life for older girls. Margaret Carlin is a clever, introspective, intense girl whose early life is spent in Illinois. Then come years in a Dakota "boom" town and in Nebraska. Margaret passes through the various experiences of girlhood—its absorbing friendships, disillusionments, class rivalries and disappointments, but at length works her way to a certain degree of self-realization. These are natural every-day boys and girls.

In the West, Dr. Serviss, a student of microbes, meets with Viola Lambert, the daughter of a spiritualistic mother who allows her daughter's occult powers to be used by unscrupulous people. Later the girl is brought to Boston and New York and the scenes described show the author has studied occultism and spiritual manifestations closely. Dr. Serviss and his sister undertake the rescue of Viola from her exploiters, foremost among whom is a fascinating minister. The details of the strange psychic power of the otherwise normal girl are worked into a stirring plot.

George, H:, jr. The menace of privilege: a study of the dangers to the republic from the existence of a favored class. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. [N.] c. 12+421 p. O. cl., $1.50 net.

The inequality of rights among American citizens owing to privilege or private laws bought with money dishonestly made, which enable one-sixth of the community to keep the other five-sixths in bondage is the subject. The author piles up a startling array of facts. His remedy would be a very heavy land-tax which would make it impossible to hold unused land, would furnish a capital for the government, lower the price of commodities and give the poor man a chance to work land for himself. Great dangers are prophesied if this injustice continues.

Gerard, Dorothea, [Mme. Longard de Longarde.] Sawdust: a romance of the timberlands; frontispiece by R. R. Rollins. Phil., J: C. Winston Co., 1905. c. 2+361 p. D. (Griffin ser.) cl., $1.

These are the timberlands of Carpathia, where a rich German lumber-merchant, by means of a cunning contract for logs, obtains control of the estate of an impoverished Polish nobleman. But the self-made merchant has a son, well educated and fine natured, and the count has a daughter, both beautiful and high-spirited; and these two young people promptly fall in love with each other, forgetting the invisible barrier of rank. Opposition arises from the democratic merchant, who prides himself on being a workman, so that it is only when ruin overtakes the owner of the saw-mill that the Polish countess is won by her bourgeois lover.

Gernerö, Jeremiah Meitzler Mohr. An East Indian tale of a great king who lay sick unto death. To cheer his last moments his physician sent for an old story-teller who told of the great trials to which a lover submitted to win a bride. His burial alive, fights with tigers and poisonous serpents were mild forms of torture. When the harrowing tale had ended happily, the king was better and knew that "one in the grip of death may yet escape." The author is a high cast Indian, who writes in English.

 A study of city government in America from the viewpoint of organization and structure. No attempt has been made to describe methods adopted by different cities, but to treat the general subject of municipal government under such subdivisions as the city as an organ of government, the development of the city in the United States, State control of cities, The city council, School administration, etc. The author is Eaton Professor of Administrative Law and Municipal Science in Columbia University and has already published two books on "Municipal home rule" and "Municipal problems."

 Some twelve years ago Professor Goodnow wrote a work entitled "Comparative administrative law." The great interest in administrative subjects, now so manifest in this country, has led him since to believe that a fuller treatment of American administrative conditions than was possible in a book devoted to a comparison of different administrative systems was desirable. This is his reason for preparing this work. It follows the same plan adopted in his "Comparative administrative law," retaining in a number of instances the language used in the former work. In the main, however, the portions of the former work dealing with American conditions have been greatly amplified, if not absolutely rewritten.

In a little western town a young physician confided to a friend that a man he could not respect had saved his life and the claim upon him of this fact was irksome. Later he came to New York and met a woman with whom fate threw him closely. They travelled to England for her father's health and met the distrusted life saver. The girl's father asked the doctor of the other man's character and the claims of gratitude and the counter-claims of love brought many moments when it was difficult to be just, generous and true to all.

In his preface, the author says of his work: "It endeavors to apply a doctrine of intention to the world, the Bible, the church, the creed, and conduct. Dangerous and mischievous as such a pretension may appear, it will be found upon perusal to contain the customary limitations of ethics. . . . But this book covers a great many other lines of thought. We have brought forward intention as the final standard of judgment by which men are to inspect the world, the Bible, the church, the creed, and their own conducts."

The author has tried to make Lowell tell his own story as far as possible in brief extracts from letters, journals and private note books. He has with special pains traced out the chronology of Lowell's life and has endeavored to present him in the many-sided phases of his activity, and to give the reader a sense of his personal attraction. There are two concluding chapters containing an analysis of his prose and poetical work based on long study of Lowell's writings. Dr. Greenslet is the author of a life of "Walter Pater," and is also associate editor of the Atlantic Monthly.

The great work going on for the amelioration of the hard lives of deep sea fishermen is described in the words of two sailors, one working in the North Sea, the other on the coast of Labrador. What mission ships and self-sacrificing physicians have accomplished in the past twenty-five years is told with the ring of truth. The author, a member of the Royal College of Surgeons has lived his self-sacrificing life for over twenty years on both sides of the Atlantic and he unfolds a tale of hardships, danger, adventure and romance under conditions as yet hardly realized beyond the circle of those who know "the price of fish."

The author sees nothing terribly new or strange in present economic conditions. He thinks they differ in degree, but not in kind. He recommends as solution Christian sociology, which in its broad sense he takes to mean a recognition of the rights of others and obedience to existing laws, with just punishment of each individual offender. He is not afraid of corporations and trusts, but thinks every individual concerned should be conscientious and do his duty in making others so. The indifference and laziness of individuals he arraigns with force.

The Booksellers' League is the first booktrade organization formed with the purpose of uniting its members primarily for social intercourse, but with the intention also of raising the standards and equipment of the calling. It was organized in December, 1894, as a national society with headquarters in New York. Besides its many social meetings, it has maintained an employment bureau and in other ways has aided the younger members of the trade. This volume tells the story of its first decade, in authoritative detail, and is an interesting and encouraging record of successful work.

The author has brought together in one connected presentation the chief results of his investigations concerning the factors of organic evolution. Portions of his theory of divergence which were published in the Linnean Society's Journal are reproduced in the appendix, with careful revision; but the fullest exposition of the fact that all evolution, as we now observe it, is divergent, and that other factors besides natural selection are absolutely necessary both for the origin and the continuance of this divergence, is given in the new chapters constituting the body of the volume. These chapters were written while the author was considering the most recent biological investigations bearing on the general theory of segregation.

Gulick, Sidney Lewis, D.D. The white peril in the far east: an interpretation of the significance of the Russo-Japanese war. N. Y. and Chic., Revell, 1905. c. 191 p. D. cl., *$1 net.

Long residence in Japan particularly fits Mr. Gulick for the writing of a book of this kind. He will be recalled as the author of a work on somewhat similar lines, "Evolution of the Japanese." "The white peril" which threatens Japan is the ambitions and aggressions of the white man. This side of the question is given with great fairness to both Japanese and Europeans. A study is made of the significance of the war, and the problems of the Far East, while the blessings the white race brings to the Orient are also recognized. Other chapters are on: Japan's recent development; Japan's ability to maintain a prolonged war, etc.

The author of "Mr. Barnes of New York" has a story of mystery about the sudden death of the governess in a rich new York society family. Dr. Burton is a very rich young doctor who assists Dr. Stohl in a very fashionable practice. Some peculiar circumstances are explained by two of the characters being Mormons. Dr. Burton, although supposed to be rather dissipated and inattentive in business turns out to be a profound scientist who works wholly for the improvement of his fellowmen.

Gunter, Archibald Clavering. A prince in the garret: a novel. N. Y., Home Publishing Co., [1905.] c. 3-278 p. 1 il. D. cl., $1.50; pap., 50 c.

A pension on the Rue de Provence, Paris, conducted by an elderly Englishwoman, formerly a school teacher and rather severe towards her queer collection of boarders, is the scene. Two of her former pupils—both Americans—drift to her house. One believes herself to be a great heiress, then is led to think she has lost her fortune. She tries to hide her identity, as she fears the fortune hunter. The other has just been privately married, and has been placed with her old teacher for protection, while her husband is absent on business. He pretends he is her brother, she masquerading under her maiden name. Many amusing complications arise as both girls find admirers. The time is 1867.

Indexes 67 magazines for five years in one alphabet. The compiler was formerly reference librarian at the University of Minnesota. She has brought together the material which was scattered through seventeen alphabets in seventeen separate numbers of "The cumulative index to a selected list of periodical literature" and "The readers' guide to periodical literature." The work is closely modelled on the original Poole's Index begun in 1882 which has appeared in five yearly volumes till 1902, but in some ways the work has been made more practical. Still "The readers' guide" as yet only indexes 67 periodicals as against 137 now covered by the "Annual literary index" in one alphabet year by year.

A Spanish story of revenge. A rich marquis robs a cavalier of his wife and brings about her death. The noble becomes a bandit, kidnaps the son of the marquis and brings him up as a farmer with the same people who are guarding his motherless daughter. The plot is involved and secret meetings, bull-fights and final happiness make a story full of action and interest.

The present work, as its title indicates, is a supplementary volume to "The riddle of the universe." While the latter undertook to make a comprehensive survey of the general questions of science—as cosmological problems—in the light of the monistic philosophy, the present volume is confined to the realm of organic science, or the science of life. It seeks to deal connectedly with the general problems of biology, in strict accord with the monistic and mechanical principles which the author laid down in 1866 in his "General morphology."

"Silver Bells" was the name of an Indian maiden who really existed. She was loved by a young Englishman, who left home and family to seek happiness among the Indians of Canada. He lived like the savages, and attained fame as a mighty hunter. His adventures are rich in romance—his own story and that of the girl he loved being based on fact.

A conclusion to the author's "She." Several years after the return of Ludwig Horace Holly and his ward, Leo Vincey, from their extraordinary adventures recorded in "She," the two men receive a summons to start again in search of the elusive queen Ayesha, or She. For sixteen years their quest carries them through the mountains of Central Asia; they meet with almost insuperable difficulties, natural and supernatural, but at last their goal is reached. The story of these years of wandering is here given in the words of Ludwig Horace Holly.

The master-word is love which always means sacrifice. The scene is Tennessee among the phosphate mines. The wife of Philip Lawton condoned his sin in being father of a child by a mulatto woman and brought up the girl in her own family ignorant of her relationship but knowing she was of negro blood. The clever, beautiful girl hates her mother's race, but is totally submissive to her step-sister. The great problem of race mixture is discussed from its scientific, ethical and emotional view-points. Mrs. Lawton, to shield the girl and help her bear the burden of her father's sin, tells her sad story at the turning point of her life when she and her sister fall in love with the same man.

This is a far more ambitious and comprehensive attempt at a descriptive interpretation of the Japanese art of jiu-jitsu, or jiudo, than was undertaken in the writers' earlier volumes on the subject. It presents in its entirety the Kano system of jiu-jitsu, devised by Professor Jigoro Kano, with the additions thereto that have been made by those famous jiu-jitsuans, Hoshino and Tsutsumi. It is the system officially adopted by the Japanese government. It begins with the simplest of combat tricks and progresses by degrees to tricks that may be made, in stress of dire necessity, most disastrous and even deadly.

Harold Mason, the finished product of Boston and Harvard, is suddenly sent to San Francisco by his father to put through an important transaction "deal." He starts reluctantly because of a girl whom he knows he will lose all chances of winning by his absence. But his amazement is only equalled by his joy when he finds that Sybil is also a passenger on the same train bound for San Francisco. As a loyal Westerner she then proceeds to give the insular Bostonian a post-graduate course of instruction in the beauties of his own country as they speed westward over the Santa Fé route, stopping for two days in the Grand Canyon. And at San Francisco he receives his diploma as well as a blessing.

During a tour in the Far East three years ago the author studied his surroundings, particularly in connection with commercial aspects. These impressions are now corrected and brought to date, the author thinking that the settlement of the Russo-Japanese war has made all that is accurately known of Japan, Korea and China of specially timely interest. An appendix gives the agreement between Great Britain and Japan signed January 30, 1902, and good maps and a practical index make the book of lasting worth.

- Of ancient Agra, the author says. little except traces of its foundation remains. The history is lost in the legends of Krishna and of the heroes of the Mahabharata. The modern city was founded by Akbar, 1558. Among Muhammadans it still retains its name of Akbarabad, which is intimately associated with romance of Great Moguls and known throughout the world as the city of Taj. The author's purpose in describing the archaeological and artistic wonders of the historic city is to incite in travellers a proper understanding and appreciation of one of the greatest epochs of Indian art.

- The interest centres entirely in Ora Pinsent a popular English actress with a husband somewhere in the background and Ashley Mead, a barrister of few briefs, who falls in love with her. The study of Ora's character is a most careful one. She is only met in private life, with her friends and admirers, where she seems to be as much of an actress as on the stage. Her excitable, superficial nature and her love for dramatic situations, which often carry her to the very brink of immorality, are illustrated through a wealth of witty dialogue, and worldly philosophy. Ashley Mead is a good type of the modern society man, not without noble impulses. Ora sacrifices to her love of the stage both friends and lover.

This historical monograph, although by a professor in the department of history in the Catholic University of America, and published with the approval of Archbishop Williams of Boston, is in no sense a sectarian work. His preface says: "Recent investigation into the relations between the Christian church and the Roman State during the first three centuries of our era has thrown new light on the history of this long period of persecution, and has served to show that the opposition to Christianity on the part of the Roman authorities arose from a deep-seated adherence to time-honored state policy rather than from blind hatred for the followers of the new religion."

"The objects of this book are, to set forth, clearly the fundamental principles of the steam-engine, to give a broad description of constructive practice, to explain fully the working of the machine in its several departments, and to show how to find its efficiency in performance. Manner of presentation and order in development of the subject have been strongly influenced by the fact that it is intended to be a text-book for the use of students: but with this has gone the purpose of making it a complete engineering treatise, in which the theory of the steam-machine shall be put into shape convenient of practical application, and which, on the descriptive side, shall lay a solid foundation for the more special and detailed information which must be gained from experience and from the technical press."—Preface.

Philadelphia at the beginning of the 20th century is the scene. Linsey Attila Cards began his fortune in the Civil War and has become a great millionaire and trust director. The author tells the story of the Civil War and of the fine traits of ideal Americans both north and south. He proves that the inherent good in individuals will yet create a new American ideal for which men and women will make unselfish sacrifices. He fears and detests the house that Cards has built, but loves and honors and has hopes of its builder.

- Like "An island cabin" and "The house in the woods," this last story, completing the trilogy, tells of experiences in New York City where the narrator first came with only a poem to seek his fortunes. His descriptions of New York scenes and conditions are vivid and the illustrations are excellent. The author did not want to be rich or successful in the usual adaptation of the term. He found a helpmeet and chose the obscurity of a farm in the Catskills from where he sent his optimistic messages to the toilers in lodgings. They are burnt out and make a visit to the city and take an automobile tour in which all the characteristic sights are described in a manner to convey much information.

- Henry, Arthur. The unwritten law: a novel. N. Y., A. S. Barnes & Co., 1905. [Mr.] c. 6+401 p. D. cl., $1.50.
- The fortunes of a German family living in New York and Brooklyn are worked into an intensely human and dramatic story told in language of unusual fearlessness. The man is an engraver. He and his hard-working wife save up a fortune of $10,000, but are heart-broken because they have no children. Two daughters are finally given them and then the bank fails to which they have trusted their savings. The man finds a way to keep his family fed, which is in course of time a great surprise. In the daughters' lives are mirrored many of the problems clamoring for solution in our present day life. Not the decrees of law and society but "the unwritten law" deep in the human soul is now commended as the voice to be followed in all the dealings of human beings with one another.

Of this work the author says in his preface, "The narrative of Browning's life, in the earlier chapters, makes no pretence to biographical completeness. An immense mass of detail and anecdote bearing upon him is now available and within easy reach. I have attempted to sift out from this picturesque loose drift the really salient and relevant material. Much domestic incident, over which the brush would fain linger, will be missed; on the other hand, the great central epoch of Browning's poetic life, from 1846 to 1869, has been treated, deliberately, on what may appear an inordinately generous scale."

E. V. Harrington, whose memoirs are here presented, stands for a certain class of American business men of the present day—uncultured, unscrupulous and ambitious—eager to make money quickly, not questioning the methods. He came to Chicago in 1877 a penniless boy, found a situation to drive a butcher's wagon, and gradually rose to be a man of prominence and the moving spirit of the great Meat Products Company, finally representing Illinois in the U. S. Senate. A glimpse is given of the days of the Haymarket riot and the trial that followed; also of the great World's Fair. While the people and incidents are commonplace, Mr. Herrick pictures phases of American life successfully.

An enthusiastic, poetic young Englishman devoid of all conventionality finds himself in the highly conventional Italy of the eighteenth century. He is Quixotic in his devotion to women and utterly tactless, always putting himself in the wrong and spending his time in regrets and doing penance. Honor, religion and love are his fetiches and the leaden feet of his idols show among the capuchins of the Italian cities and the trading Jews. The language is sometimes rather too unconventional also. To be "naked and not ashamed" is the gist of the author's story of human nature and art.

"This book consists of two parts, the deductive and the inductive logic. The former treats of the general nature of our thought processes as well as the fundamental principles and practice of deduction, and is now published for the first time. The latter is my inductive logic which was published in 1896, now revised and incorporated in this volume. It has been my endeavor to present in connection with the more formal and traditional treatment of the deductive logic also some considerations which have been contributed by the discussions of the modern logic and which find expression in such works as those of Sigwart, Lotze, Erdmann, Green, Bosanquet, Penn and others."—Author's Preface, Stuart, Professor of Logic in Princeton University.

Hichens, Rob. Smythe. The garden of Allah. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1905. Ja.] c. 4+482 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A rich English woman of thirty-two without family ties goes to the "Garden of Allah" (the Desert of Sahara) alone with her maid. Her traveling companion, after reaching Africa, is a mysterious man of strong individuality, a Russian who disclaims all religion. The woman is a Catholic. They marry. After a few months the man tells his wife the story of his life. The end is dramatic and brought about by deep religious convictions. The atmosphere of the desert gives great originality to the setting.

"The present volume, on 'The struggle for universal empire' and the following, on 'The establishment of territorial sovereignty,' may be regarded as indicating the foundations of modern diplomacy. They trace the tragic history of the rise and conflict of two great international institutions, the Empire and the Papacy, the defeat of their ambitions, and the development of modern national states. In future volumes it is intended to consider the diplomacy of the age of absolutism, of the Revolutionary Era, of the constitutional movement, and of commercial imperialism, thus bringing the history of international development down to the present time. Each volume, however, is intended to be for the period which it covers, a complete work in itself."—Preface.

A mysterious murder is supposed to have taken place on November 3, 1902, in an American county. The story of the hotly contested trial is told in the words of the foreman of the jury, a writer on Persian poetry and articles for encyclopedias, who had his honorable position in the case thrust upon him much against his will. The case occupied all his thoughts and led him to private investigations that produced startling complications. The reader is treated to untold surprises until the greatest of all ends a romantic detective story.

Perhaps no part of the history of South Carolina is looked upon by the people of the state as of greater significance than the era of reconstruction. The interest which attaches to the period and the oft-expressed desire that its events be adequately treated with strictly historical method, led the writer to undertake this monograph. What is here offered is an installment of a projected history, already in preparation, of the entire reconstruction movement in South Carolina.

A New England farm passed into the hands of a man who made much money out West and spent his life in philanthropic work. On his death he sends his grand-nephew his last wish that the farm should be restored to rightful owners whom he had dispossessed in his youth. The love-story involved introduces a girl of good old family who goes as waitress to the abandoned farm and finds herself among the possessions of her ancestors. "Connie's mistake" appeared many years ago.

A story of mistaken identity, centering in the person of a boy, Jack Coverdale, who, having escaped from one English school, is mysteriously taken to another where he finds he is supposed to be one Alfred Price, who has run away. Jack does not correct the error, and soon finds himself involved in a plot to kidnap his chum at Badminster, a rich American boy. There is a midnight capture, a collision at sea and at length a happy escape for both boys, when Jack is able to right himself in the eyes of all. A second story. "A row in the sixth," fills the last third of the volume.

One of the old-time Australian bushrangers is pictured in "Stingaree"—a handsome, well-dressed outlaw, with a passion for music, and with as many good deeds to his credit as bad ones. This modern Robin Hood is cleverly introduced as the patron of a young English governess with a beautiful but unappreciated voice. How he obtains a hearing for her and starts her on the road to fame is original and dramatic. The other chapters recording his deeds, do not deal with episodes quite as innocent, and are often nothing more than stories of stealing and murder of the ordinary type.

A young man who has not proved a brilliant success in an American business is given a chance to make a fortune in new fields and is sent to Athens and the islands in the Mediterranean to buy up cream of tartar to use in making famous baking-powder. His mind is diverted from business by meeting a beautiful Greek girl in great sorrow. He learns her history and by accident stumbles on facts that lead to the girl, who is living as a servant, finding that she comes of noble family and has a claim to the "monks' treasure." This is obtained after most exciting adventures.

"This volume is a reversal of method. It is an attempt at the economic interpretation of the city. It holds that the corruption, the indifference, the incompetence of the official and the apathy of the citizen, the disparity of wealth, the poverty, vice, crime, and disease, are due to causes economic and industrial. They are traceable to our institutions, rather than to the depravity of human nature. Their correction is not a matter of education or of the penal code. It is a matter of industrial democracy. The incidental conditions are personal and ethical. Whether we adopt the personal or the economic interpretation will determine our attitude towards the problems of modern city life."—Preface.

Mr. and Mrs. Crombie, of Boston, who have bought a place in New Hampshire in order to escape the distractions of summer shore resorts, are overwhelmed by the announcement of a week's visit from a niece, known to hold "opinions" and to be following a "career." The advent of the girl also brings upon the scene a young Englishman, her declared lover, whom, it seems, she wishes to try against a domestic background. An old student friend of the most also appears with his wife to furnish the object lesson in the pitiable results of the mating of incompatible temperaments. The story is an analytical study of the working of the modern masculine and feminine mind under the influence of love.

"The chief idea underlying the preparation of this volume has been to present to the people of Michigan a true account of the life and work of John D. Pierce, our first superintendent of Public instruction. Almost seventy years have gone since he entered upon his educational work, and more than twenty years since his death, and as yet no adequate study of his career has appeared. . . . Falling as Mr. Pierce's labors in education did in the period coincident with the beginnings of our statehood, it has been thought desirable as an introduction to his life and work to offer some preliminary observations concerning our national and local educational inheritances, as well as to sketch briefly the course of Michigan history up to the close of the Territorial days."—Preface.

"Who murdered Edgar Moxton?"—a young man, found stabbed in the back just within the gate of his London suburban residence—is the question the novel aims to answer. Suspicion is at first cast upon the man's wife, then transferred to a half dozen other persons in succession, whose lives and characters are made deeply interesting as they are brought before the reader as links in the chain of evidence. The men who play detectives are an impetuous young doctor, called to examine the murdered man, and an energetic newspaper man.

A jade fan that once belonged to a Chinese Mandarin, and that in an apparently unexplainable manner is in the hands of people living in England, is the cause of a wonderful series of adventures. It is advertised for and an enormous sum offered for its return. A young man of birth and position, who needs money in order to marry and to wipe out the mortgage on his estates, determines to find the fan. He is baffled both by Chinese intrigue and the attempts of his own friends to discover the fan. The mystery surrounding the fan is exceedingly well preserved to the end.

The events of this story are all brought about by the boast of a middle-aged spinster, who believes woman is the equal if not the superior of man. She tells her brother, a country gentleman and master of the Cranston hounds, that she could easily do his work, and not make half the fuss he does about it. Shortly afterward he is killed while hunting, and an extraordinary will is found, leaving Miss Badsworth his estate, if she personally keeps up the hunting for a month each year. The episodes that spring from this will are most amusing, showing not only Miss Badsworth's incompetency in the direction it indicates, but many other complications.

Hutchinson, Horace Gordon. Two moods of a man. N. Y., Putnam, 1905. c. 5+321 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The hero, a cultivated Englishman, is a strange psychological study. With high ideals and apparent integrity of character, he wrecks the lives of two women he loves. The first is a Spanish gypsy, to whom he is united by a ceremony that has no legal binding. Meeting in London a rich and brilliant American girl, he marries her, relentlessly deserting the first woman who believed herself his wife, and his little boy. Remorse takes hold of him after a while and he becomes an opium eater. Heart trouble ends his career suddenly the day after the gypsy dies. Long philosophical discussions between the hero and an author friend are a feature of the book.

Hutten, Bettina, (Baroness v.) He and Hecuba: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. [O.] c. 4+299 p. D. cl., $1.50.

King Hardy, an English clergyman, in his youth had loved an Italian woman and unintentionally killed her husband. Later he marries an English girl, and between poverty, pride, numerous children and an incompetent wife, he finds life a grim struggle to which remorse for the unsuspected tragedy of his youth is an added burden. At the home of his friends, Lord and Lady Yarrow, he meets a beautiful Spanish woman, supposed to be a widow, but whom he finds out is the wife of Lord Yarrow's dearest friend. Driven by poverty, Hardy turns the story of his early folly into a novel, which, published anonymously as "He and Hecuba," becomes the book of the hour, denounced for its immorality.

while admired for its power. But the Spanish woman, recognizing Hardy as its author and original, becomes madly infatuated with the man of the book. Hardy, wearied out with life's struggle, hating and distrusting himself, loses his life in a diphtheria epidemic, and the woman meets her deserved end.

Pam is an original girl-child, born out of wedlock by perfectly happy parents. Her experience of life brings her the conviction that marriage leads to disillusion and indifference. She decides never to marry. When love comes to her she discusses her life theories with candor and animation. Her grandfather and the wife of the man who is her father have great influence on "Pam" who is wholly natural and human.

More than 50 years ago, Captain Manning, an ex-U. S. A. trooper, started with his family and servants across the plains to California, tempted not only by the gold craze, but by the opportunities offered his boys and girls to find occupations. The story deals with one special episode of the little band. The young people travel ahead of the father and mother, and are separated from them by a cloudburst, finding themselves isolated on a portion of land separated from the main land. Being attacked by a puma, finding an Indian who has been bitten by a rattlesnake, with other equally wonderful adventures, are among the things which happen to the young people before they rejoin the rest of their party.

A pretty little girl and her mother almost lose their lives in a steamboat accident on the Massachusetts coast. The mother is carried out to sea on some wreckage, rescued by a steamer and carried on to England and placed in a sanitarium, the shock having affected her memory, so she is unable to tell who she is. The little girl is found by a hard, gaunt New England woman, who takes her to her home and makes a drudge of her. The child finds companionship in the birds and dumb animals, and attracts the love and attention of all who see her. Finally she is by accident restored to her mother, who returns to Boston in good health.

As the result of an expedition of two months during the fall of 1902 among the people of Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands, it was decided that the Igorot of the Bontoc pueblo "are as typical of the primitive mountain agriculturist of Luzon as any group visited." Therefore, Mr. Jenks and his wife took up residence in a Bontoc pueblo and remained five months, studying these primitive natives. The results of the investigations are here set down, comprising observations of the general social customs of the Igorot, their economic life, religion, language, folk tales, dress, amusements, etc., and forming an exhaustive ethnologic study of these island savages. The book is copiously illustrated by full-page pictures from the author's photographs and there are several valuable maps.

Jocelyn, Lydia A., and Cuffee, Nathan J. Lords of the soil: a romance of Indian life among early English settlers. Bost., C. M. Clark Publishing Co., 1905. 8+467 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The Indian tribes of Long Island in the early years of the seventeenth century and grasping English colonists bent upon gaining the lands of "the lords of the soil," through any unscrupulous means are the characters in a series of dramatic episodes, in which Indian rites, customs and costumes are unusually well described. The romantic element is furnished through a beautiful Indian girl named "Heather Flower," the daughter of a great chief, whose affections have been stolen by an English officer, the scion of a noble house already affianced to a white girl. "Heather Flower" discovers his duplicity and swears revenge, in which she is aided by her tribe.

Although the novel is founded on dramatic scenes of the French Revolution, these only form a background for the romantic story. The heroine is supposed to be a flower girl of Paris, who lived and sold cockades in the Reign of Terror. This girl is caught in the whirl of events and forced to sacrifice her own feelings in the cause of liberty. The author's purpose seems to be to show the effects of the Revolution on the social life of Paris, especially on that of the common people.

This chapter of the "little colonel's" story has its scene in Madam Chartley's aristocratic school on the Potomac, known as Warwick Hall. Here Lloyd and Allison and the other Kentucky girls meet new friends, and have many good times. Lloyd Sherman has grown so beautiful that her title of "Little Colonel" has that of "Princess" substituted for it. The story ends with Lloyd's going home for the Christmas holiday, and the events of her vacation.

Beginning with the old legends, the story of the Irish nation is traced throughout its picturesque course down to the present day. The pillaging of the Danes, the coming of the Normans, the oppression of Elizabeth, the cruelty of the Cromwellian incursions, and the invasion of William of Orange are carefully and fairly described. The recent Irish problems, such as Irish church disestablishment, Catholic Emancipation, Land Purchase, Home Rule, etc., are fully treated.

The larger portion of this book consists of a brief account of each of Chopin's compositions, arranged according to opus numbers, its relative place, distinguishing features, and an epitome of the comments or criticisms that have been made upon it by great writers, critics, biographers and virtuosi who have written about Chopin. There is also an introductory sketch of the musician's life and a glance at various aspects of his life and works. The author believes such a work will be of use to music lovers who have become more familiar with Chopin's compositions since the pianola has increased opportunities for hearing the most difficult kinds of music.

Hadley owes its existence to a religious controversy in the churches of Hartford and Wethersfield. It grew so hot that Governor John Webster and his friends decided to seek a new home where they could be at peace. Consequently in 1659 a company of sixty colonists journeyed fifty miles through the wilderness and laid the foundation of the present town of Hadley in the Connecticut Valley. Sylvester Judd's "History" of this enterprise was published in 1863. It has long been out of print and the demand for a new edition has led to this republication. A biographical sketch of Judd is included.

Written to foster an interest in insect biology on the part of students of natural history, of nature observers, and of general readers; the work provides in a single volume a general systematic account of all the principal groups of insects as they occur in America, together with special accounts of the structure, physiology, development and metamorphoses, and of certain particularly interesting and important ecological relations of insects with the world around them. Systematic entomology, economic entomology, and what may be called the bionomics of insects are the special subjects of the matter and illustration of the book.—Prefatory Note.

George Rundle Prynne was born in the little fishing village of West Looe, in Cornwall, on August 23, 1818. He was a notable figure in the Catholic movement of the 19th century. His first and greatest work for the Anglican Church was the restoration of the daily eucharist after the lapse of centuries. The vindication of the sacrament of penance, the development and organization of sisterhood work in parishes, with other things, were among his accomplishments.

Hadji Khan, calling himself "Haji Raz," is a devout Mohammedan who has been educated in England. Like all sincere followers of the Prophet he determines to undertake the pilgrimage to Mecca, the highest act of devotion in the Mohammedan faith. After introductory chapters on Mohammedan rites and beliefs and on different Persian sects, the authors tell the story of the pilgrimage from London to Mecca and describe the various observances enjoined during the days of the Hadji. The concluding chapters relate especially to Meccan scenes and customs. The greater part of this work appeared first in the London Morning Post.—Index.

Miss Cynthia at the age of thirty-five was informed by her physician that she had only one more year to live. She had lived a narrow life, tormented by a New England conscience and controlled first by her mother and then by an old family servant. She had plenty of means but lived a very frugal life. She decides to follow her own inclinations for the last year of her life. She shows her natural generous nature, makes all about her happy and finds herself growing stronger day by day. Finally, an old lover, now a doctor, takes her into his keeping and completes her cure.

Camden, S. C. is one of the oldest towns in this country, having been laid out according to an act of the Council of George II. in 1734 as the township of Fredericksburg, later known as Camden. This history, prepared from local records and documents in the state archives at Columbia and Charleston, traces the development of Camden and its vicinity from earliest days. The first volume is devoted to the Colonial and Revolutionary periods, and shows the important part this community played in national affairs. It has been the home of men who have figured largely in the political life of state and nation. Vol. 2 will continue the record through the 19th century.

Knowles, Rob. E. St. Cuthbert's: a novel. N. Y. and Chic., Revell, 1905. c. 3-339 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author is in charge of the largest Presbyterian church in Canada, which is in Galt, one of the smaller towns. The story, told in first person, is of a call to the parish of St. Cuthbert's where he has some up-hill work owing to his being of Irish descent. His wife and daughter are ideal women and the daughter's love story strongly influences her father's work in the parish. The details of parish life among orthodox Scotchmen in Canada are told with humor and pathos.

A little book based upon a correspondence recently published in Germany that was carried on for many years between Richard Wagner and Mathilde Wesendonk. Frau Wesendonk is said to have inspired Wagner's most impassioned creation, his "Isolde," and to have been his confidant in all his musical inspirations. Gustav Kobbé tells his story through a selection of these letters and journals, to which he gives an introduction and the connecting narrative. It is a most romantic episode in the life of a great genius, and has stirred the musical world strongly.

Tells the story of the first great heroic period of the West. At the same time that the early explorers of New France were pressing from the east, westward, a tide of adventure had set across Siberia and the Pacific, eastward. Eventually these two tides met and coalesced in the great fur trade that won the West. The first part of the book deals with the Russians on the Pacific coast; next the American and English adventurers are considered, while the concluding chapters treat of the Russian-American Fur Company. For obvious reasons the Spaniards of the Southwest have not been included.

In 1857, John Doyle Lee, a chief among the Mormon Brotherhood known as the Danites, was ordered by Brigham Young and the leading counsellors of the Mormon church to take his men and murder a party of emigrants then on their way through Utah to California. This wholesale murder was given the title of "The Mountain Meadows Massacre." It was not till twenty years later, in 1877, that Lee was shot to death for his crimes, by the U. S. government. While in prison he wrote his life, which was published after his death. The Mormons bought up the whole edition, excepting one or two copies, from one of which this volume is printed. It is a terrible story of the Mormon church, its power, treachery, etc.

Le Gallienne, R: Odes from the Divan of Hafiz freely rendered from literal translations. Bost., L. C. Page & Co., 1905. 27+104 p. nar. O. bds., $1.50.

The following renderings, says Richard Le Gallienne, have been made on the basis of two literal translations of the poet, first, the prose translation, by Colonel Wilberforce Clarke, Calcutta, 1891, and second the verse translation in accordance with the original forms, by Mr. John Payne, London, 1901. The aim of both has been exact verbal literalness at any cost rather than literary transmutation. They virtually corroborate each other. A few notes here and there explain certain orientalisms in the text. The hundred odes translated are numerically less than a sixth of the whole "Divan." Hafiz was born in Shiraz, early in the fourteenth century; the exact date of his birth or death is unknown, as is also his family name. Hafiz is similar to a college degree; it signifies one who can recite the Koran.

Leonard, Mary Finley. The story of the big front door. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1905.] c. 4+257 p. D. cl., †75 c.

"The big front door" was the name given by a neighbor to the house opposite, firstly because it had a big friendly looking front door, and secondly because it (the door) was always overflowing with children, boys and girls, apparently always bent upon some business or some expedition, in or out of the house that required great haste and energy. It is the story of these very interesting little groups that is told.

Womanhood in its relation to humanity is the subject of this poem. The preamble represents the story as having been revealed to the author by the Statue of Liberty at a moment when the face of the statue is illuminated by a searchlight ray directed upon it from one of the vessels in the harbor.

Mr. Le Roy is eminently fitted to write on life in the Philippines. He was for several years connected with the Department of the Interior in the Philippine Government, when he made a special investigation of conditions in the islands. Since his return he has continued his studies and is already known as an authority on the Philippines. His book gives a full description of life among the native tribes, and also in the Spanish and American communities.

The story takes readers to Dodge, supposed to be the most famous town of the old cattle trail, which stretched from New Mexico to Canada west of the Rockies. The author strives to impress upon his readers that the West was settled before the East by the Spanish that landed before the Puritans. This story plays in the time when buffaloes were the great source of western wealth and in the days which followed when cattle and farms began to build up the West.

The present translation was undertaken about 1880, the date of republication of List's works in Germany. It consists of four parts—the history, the theory, the systems and the politics of national economy. "In translating the work," says Mr. Lloyd, "my aim has been to render the original as literally as possible, and to afford English readers the opportunity of testing List's political theories. The German economist's views were first published before 1844, previous to the repeal of the corn and navigation laws of Great Britain, hence some of the political situations considered are obsolete.

The author has had a life-long residence in the east, where he acquired a knowledge of the Chinese language; his business necessitated extended travel in China and the neighboring countries and so facilitated the accumulation of the needful knowledge of the regions described. The first of his journeys was made in 1860, at the time that Shanghai was invested by the Tarpings, and led from Ningpo up the Tsientang river through Nanhui, and so by way of the famous potteries of Kingtehchen down the Payang lake to Kiukiang—the whole country traversed being the scene of the great struggle then going on between the forces of Hungshu-chuen and the Imperialists. Other journeys were made in untravelled parts of China, also in its dependencies, also in Japan, etc.

Sir Marcus Ordeyne, a reserved, middle-aged, bookish man, has suddenly thrust upon him the guardianship of Carlotta, a young girl from Aleppo. Although the child of English parents Carlotta has been brought up in a harem, and is a thorough Orientalist in thought and education. Sir Marcus establishes Carlotta in his home under the care of his housekeeper, utterly regardless of the conventional aspect of the conditions. Although a bachelor, Ordeyne has other ties, which bring about a network of emotional situations, which are not wanting in humor or pathos.

The author points out that to advanced students of logical minds Haeckel's writings can only be beneficial, but he thinks general readers must be warned against their somewhat hasty and destructive portions. He does not attack Haeckel's work so much as he offers a supplement, "an extension of the more scientific portions of that work into higher and more fruitful regions of inquiry."

Seffy, slow-witted, unassertive, is the son of a Pennsylvania German whose love for his son is almost equalled by his longing for a certain piece of meadow land. Seffy's timid wooing of Sally, who owns the meadow, goes awry. Sally marries the wrong man from pique; and the old father drives his son from home in a moment of madness. Five years later the son returns, self-confident and successful, to find his father and the girl he loves comforting each other while awaiting his return.

A young country girl from Pennsylvania came to New York City to earn her living. Gives a truthful, intimate picture of the unfortunate, underpaid working girl. She worked in a box factory, she lined jewel cases, she sewed, she folded clothes in a laundry. She met every type of working girl. The author points out that the working-girl is largely responsible for what she suffers at the hands of her employers. Few girls have any definite training and they go from one kind of work to another in an irresponsible way and are often scarcely worth the pittance they earn.

A New York couple seek a country life that the wife may recuperate. They secure a furnished cottage for the summer, and take with them a colored cook, born and raised in New York. She is the Minerva of the story. She hates the darkness and silence of the country, fears every sound, longs for companionship and is utterly ignorant of everything in nature, animate and inanimate. She is always on the point of returning to New York, and it is her master and mistress's attempts at amusing and conciliating her that make the fun of the book.

While this work is a continuation of the author's previous volume (covering the years 1513-1561), the subject has been treated as a distinct episode in the history of the Spanish colonial enterprises, so that the story is complete in itself, irrespective of its relation to the preceding volume. The work embraces the period of the French settlement in Florida under Ribaut and Laudonniere, their expulsion of Pedro Menendez de Aviles, and the foundation of the first permanent Spanish colony. In addition to the relation of the events in Florida, the volume contains a review of the Spanish policy with regard to French aggression in North America, and the diplomatic relations between Philip II., and Catherine de' Medici in respect to their conflicting claims to Florida, both previous and subsequent to the massacre of the Huguenots by the Spaniards. It also gives the history of the various missions in Florida, South Carolina, and Virginia undertaken at the instigation of Spain.

Mme. Loyson is the wife of Père Hyacinthe Loyson, the leader of the Catholic reform movement in France. During 1894-6 two journeys in the Orient were made by them, in the course of which they visited Algiers, Tunis, Egypt, and the Holy Land. These journeys, taken primarily for pleasure and recuperation, became inspired by the higher purpose of a reconciliation of races and religions. Père Hyacinthe and his wife mixed freely with the Mohammedans, studied their customs and faith, and held conferences with their leading men, so that they might ascertain the points of similarity between the religion of Islam and Christianity, with a view to a broader toleration and permanent peace between Christians and Mohammedans. Mme. Loyson's book is therefore both a record of travel and a study of Mohammedanism.

This is the first attempt that has been made, the writer believes, since Talfourd's day to write the life of Charles Lamb in full. While many monographs and sketches have been written of him, he holds them all to be incomplete. "The new material that has come to light since the publication of Talfourd's 'Final Memorials' alone would justify a new biography," he says, "apart from the removal by the lapse of time, of many of the restrictions which prevented Lamb's first biographer from quoting as freely from the letters as he might have wished, and from entering fully into all the particulars of his friend's life and friendship." It has been the author's aim to collect and fuse into a single narrative the sum of this scattered information.

The text followed in this translation is that of Jacobitz, Teubner, 1901, all deviations from which are noted. Lucian lived from about 125 to about 200 A.D., under the Roman Emperors Antoninus Pius, M. Aurelius and Lucius Verus, Commodus, and perhaps Pertinax. He was a Syrian, born at Samosata on the Euphrates. He became what was called in those days a sophist or rhetorician. His many orations and dialogues in this line are embraced in these four volumes. So modern are they in thought, so replete with wit and satire, they might have been written in English. They are given complete, except where expurgation was necessary.

"The purpose is to present in a compact form those principles which underlie the design of gas engines, together with such data on the subject as seems reliable for the use of those engaged in building this kind of machinery, and who are familiar with its characteristics. The qualitative or inventive side of design, such as is treated in all the books that have so far appeared, except Guldner in German, is here entirely omitted and familiarity with such presupposed. This book is concerned entirely with the qualitative side of design, and treats solely of the forces in, and the energy-transforming power of the standard mechanism of, the exploding gas-engine."—Preface.

Lyle, Eugene P., jr. The Missourian; il. by Ernest Haskell. N. Y., Doubleday, Page & Co., 1905. [Ag.] c. 9+519 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

Tells the story of the men of General Joe Shelby's command who refused to surrender after the fall of the Confederacy and then offered their services to Maximilian, the French-imposed emperor of Mexico. Their messenger to convey this offer is John Dinwiddie Driscoll, a dare-devil, chivalrous young Missourian, who immediately on entering Mexico becomes involved in thrilling adventures in which he takes upon himself the protection of a fascinating French woman, sent as a secret emissary of Napoleon III. to deliver Mexico into his hands. Maximilian figures prominently in the story in anything but heroic light. After bitter struggling between her love for France and her love for the Missourian, even allowing herself to be lightly spoken of rather than betray her secret mission, Jacqueline at last stands clear before the world, free to make a choice.

McCarthy, Justin Huntly. The dryad: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [Mr.] c. 4+314 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

Medieval romance and Greek mythology are charmingly and wittily blended in this story. A French prince of the 14th century travelling through an enchantingly beautiful forest meets a dryad. She tells him her story—that she is the daughter of a dryad, but that her father was a mortal and that she is endowed with immortal youth. The Prince woos her, but the penalty she pays, if she weds him, it is to lose her immortality. Many picturesque events occur before the tale is brought to a successful ending, in which Simon of Rouen, a soldier of fortune, takes a vigorous part.

The opening chapters deal with the history of modern Belgium and the part that country has played in European politics. Then follows an explanation of the causes which led to the annexation by Belgium of the Congo Free State. The Arab slave trade is described and a full account is given of what Belgian rule has accomplished as a civilizing and Christianizing agent. The work is written designedly to refute the charges in circulation of cruelty and oppression by the Belgian government, and the viewpoint of the author is continental rather than English.

 Diana Chaters, the beautiful, dashing belle of Charles Town, S. C., in the early years of the eighteenth century and Robert Marshall, a young Virginian, are the figures in the love story which is here depicted. Diana had been jilted at the altar in Charles Town, and in her despair and shame had moved her home and household to Savannah. Marshall appears as an officer in the Colonial army and they quickly learn to love each other. There are many battles with the Indians, and, a vigorous picture painted of the sea-islands of Georgia. - MacGrath, Harold. The princess elopes. Indianapolis, Ind., Bobbs-Merrill Co., [1905.]

Ap.] c. 4+208 p. nar. D. (The pocket books.) cl., $75 c.

The scene is the imaginary Grand Duchy of Barscheit, located somewhere in Germany. The Grand Duke insists upon marrying his young daughter, the Princess Hildegarde, to the Prince of Doppelkinn, of his neighboring principality. The Prince is old enough to be the girl's grandfather, and she utterly refuses the alliance. After trying several ingenious methods of avoiding the marriage she elopes. Her real romance then begins, as she meets a man she loves. The American consul at Barscheit plays a part in the story.

A romance of the early sixteenth century in the days of Francis I. of France. The plot turns upon "the winged helmet," a crest embroidered on a handkerchief picked up in the corridor of the Countess Du Beaulieu, which raises jealousy in her husband. He puts away his wife and her faithful servant devotes her life to establishing her innocence. Much of the story is told in diaries of various important French nobles and also of the servant, who is put to torture but remains steadfast and finally solves many interesting mysteries.

The unscrupulous attempt of an Italian priest to convert to Romanism an American artist and his wife, and so obtain the fortune of the latter for his church is the leading motive of a story with an Italian background. His instrument in his wicked plans is a fascinating singer, over whom he has some unexplained power. He brings her in contact with the artist who wants a model for a picture of spring he is painting, and with the wife who is a brilliant musician, and commands her to weave her web around them. The conflict between these various natures is well depicted, the ending being most unexpected and tragical.

When the special subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Territories visited Alaska in the summer of 1903 for the purpose of gathering information which would enable them to legislate wisely and helpfully with regard to that great district, the author was fortunate enough to obtain permission to accompany the senatorial party in an unofficial capacity. The trip occupied about ten weeks and carried the party through the interior along the whole course of the Yukon River, and to many places on the coast and among the islands not readily accessible by the regular means of travel. It will be seen he had exceptional opportunities for gathering facts and information regarding the country, its history, its resources, etc.

The five essays which this book embraces were first read before a company of artists who had the traditional antipathy of their class toward the spirit of Puritanism. They are witty and unconventional. The first essay is on Jonathan Edwards, who in the author's view, manifests the spirit of Puritanism in the pulpit. This is followed by an essay on John Winthrop, who showed the same spirit at work in the world. Margaret Fuller, Walt Whitman and John Wesley are the subjects of the remaining essays. The author is a young man, a physician by profession, and lecturer at Bishops College in Montreal.

"For a Captain of Indian Cavalry," says the author in his introduction, "to write on strategy may at first sight appear an undertaking at once too ambitious and too presumptuous. The author hastens therefore to say that this work is not intended for students of military history and literature who have advanced beyond the initial stages of this branch of the art of war; but it is an elementary work on the principles which govern the strategical movements of troops by land, compiled by a regimental officer for the use of regimental officers."

The book is directed primarily to the needs of young people, but readers of all ages will find it instructive and entertaining. The author takes the legends and dramas which form the basis of Wagner's operas and has woven each into a direct story. Thus the Ring Cycle, which opens the series is told in four chapters, and the long gaps which come between the librettos of the operas are filled with easy-flowing continuous narrative.

Three young men meet in a Paris restaurant. One is a clergyman, one a man very much in love, the third a hardened cynic. The latter shows how all human beings have reptile qualities and sooner or later show their fangs and sting. He bets that five years hence they will all be married and all disgusted with their bargains. Much happens. When five years are up the cynic is the only happy married man. But the plot is ingenious. Magnay, Sir W. A prince of lovers: a romance; il. by Cyrus Cuneo. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1905. [Mr.] c. 5+326 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

Two of the many little independent German kingdoms which existed for two centuries after the close of the Thirty Years' War decide to marry the heir of the throne of one to the princess of the other. Suddenly the prince disappears, the king dies and the cousin usurps the throne. The lost prince in disguise rescues the princess from the house of a fortune teller and great adventures follow. He knows with whom he has fallen in love against his will, but she does not, until he has carried her off to his kingdom under pretense of claiming the usurping king's protection against her scheming chancellor. A brightly planned plot.

The present work concludes the series of "The influence of sea power upon history" as originally framed in the conception of the author. It presents in a series of vivid pictures the stirring events of the war, the points of single ship fights and squadron actions, giving due attention to the strategic interest of campaigns on the land and to the diplomacy of the period. The work is illustrated with photogravure frontispieces, maps, plans, 23 full-page plates in half-tone from original illustrations by Stanley M. Arthurs, Henry Reuterdaahl, Carlton T. Chapman, etc. An important contribution to American history.

Mallock, W: Hurrell. The reconstruction of religious belief. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [O.] c. 9+303 p. O. cl., $1.75 net.

The author treats of the necessity for finding some intellectual solution of the contradiction between science and religion. The reasoning proves that all scientific discoveries point to a monistic conclusion and that the more closely we follow scientific methods the more surely we are thrust into some region outside itself where its theories will not work. In a variety of detailed ways the book shows how integral a part of man religious feeling is.

The author in his preface says: "The stand-point from which this book is written is suggested by the title of the series. I regard Mohammed as a great man, who solved a political problem of appalling difficulty—the construction of a state and an empire out of the Arab tribes. I have endeavored, in recounting the mode in which he accomplished this, to do justice to his intellectual ability and to observe toward him the respectful attitude which his greatness deserves, but otherwise this book does not aim at being either an apology or an indictment. Indeed neither sort of work is now required."—Bibliography (3 p.)

This is a pathetic little love story of eighteen-year-old Sabina who comes in contact with an artist from the outside world and is made dissatisfied and unhappy with her life. The use of ivory as a decorative material may be traced to prehistoric days when records of aboriginal races were carved on bone or ivory. Therefore, a complete history of existing ivories would "involve a study of the whole world's art." The author has endeavored to give a comprehensive sketch of ivory sculpture, confining his examples to those found in the British Museum, South Kensington, Wallace and Mayer collections in England. Chapters are devoted to prehistoric ivory carvings, consular diptychs and other Greek and Roman carvings, early Christian ivories, chessmen and draughtsmen, ivories of China, Japan, India, etc., and present day carving. Mathews, Frances Aymar. Billy Duane: a novel. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1905. [F.] c. 7+361 p. il. D. cl., *$1.50.

A story of fashionable and political life in New York city. Claiborne Courtlandt Duane—called "Billy" by his intimates—because, as the author says, "it is not his name," is a leading Republican and a man of wealth and culture. His little boy has to be carried to a German resort for treatment, the mother going with him, so "Billy" is separated from his wife for a year. The separation estranges them, though they love each other. When Mrs. Duane returns her husband is Mayor-elect of New York and apparently caring for nothing but politics. Misunderstandings and jealousy keep them apart for a while, but they at last come together again.

For the first time the real character and motives of the peculiar people—known as "The Doukhobors"—are explained. Mr. Maude, the author, who made the arrangement with the Canadian government which led to the migration of the Doukhobors to Canada, and has closely studied them since, is able to throw much light on what has hitherto appeared unaccountable. A history is given of the Doukhobors, tracing their connection in the past with the Lollards, Anabaptists, Quakers, and other sects. There is a description of their migration to Canada and settlement in that country, and then follows an account of the extraordinary "pilgrimage" in 1902, which the Canadian government had forcibly to check.

Dr. Maxwell is a French lawyer, Deputy Attorney-General of the Court of Appeals at Bordeaux, and has taken also the degree of Doctor of Medicine. This book is the result of ten years of psychical research. His investigations have convinced him that certain unexplained phenomena, reported in all ages and conditions of culture, do occur. Such phenomena as table-moving, rappings, crystal-gazing, luminous phenomena, etc., are described with special observations recorded of the medium Eusapia Paladino. Dr. Maxwell "does not give a minute account of all the details, nor does he relate the precautions taken, nor seek to convince hostile critics that he has overlooked no possibility and made no mistakes," but states that he has done his best to test the phenomena for himself and here sets down the facts as observed.

Written to promote the spirit of harmony in religious discussions. "Its main purpose is to illustrate the fact that antithetic, and even apparently irreconcilable, religious conceptions are often to be regarded as needing to be combined in order to express the fulness of the body of truth that is to be found in the oracles of God and in the Christian life." The author does not formulate a system, he merely pleads for a broader and more sympathetic judgment of the conflicting views which only divide instead of further cultivating the knowledge of the Christian world.

The attic rooms in a lodging house of the Bohemia of New York City were occupied by three young men when the fourth room was let to a widow and a little girl. The child transformed the lives of the men by her sunny temperament. By a series of coincidences one of the men, as sunny as the child, too poor and too proud to plead his suit, is joined to the woman he loves, an adored aunt of the little attic girl.

The hand that shaped "Captain Letterblair," and "Love finds the way," has gained in cunning. Nine women and one man take the parts of Mrs. Gaskell's immortal actors on the little stage of Cranford, who played their parts in the time of King William IV. and Queen Adelaide. She sticks closely to Mrs. Gaskell's words. Gotten up daintily as a holiday book.

Mrs. Miles has spent her entire life in the heart of the Tennessee Mountains and knows intimately the characteristics of these sturdy ignorant mountaineers, as well as the natural beauties of scenery. Here she describes the actual every-day life of the people, the typical log church school, the cabin homes, the young and old mountaineers and their social relations, as well as their twisted religious beliefs and their superstitions. She touches also on their folk songs and fiddle and banjo airs—"some real American music"—and on their literature, and, in conclusion, gives practical suggestions for the development of this people.

Owing to the development of the telephone field, this work, in its 4th edition, has been almost entirely rewritten. It is now believed to cover telephone practice of to-day much more comprehensively and accurately than was true of any of the earlier editions with respect to the practical art at the times of their publication. Obsolete methods and equipment are not dealt with, except where of distinct educational or historic value; and much of the historic matter of former editions has been cut out in order to make room for modern methods and things.

The subject of marriage, its purity, its service; marriage laws and the marriage of the unmarried are treated with sincerity and frankness.

Mills, Weymer Jay. Caroline of Courtlandt St.; il. by Anna Whelan Betts; decorations by W. E. Mears. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [O.] c. 7+201 p. O. cl., $2 net.

The scene is old New York shortly after the Revolution. The historic sights, buildings, theatres, and views of the beauties of New Jersey are mixed with pure romance in which there is much humor and some pathos. The story is published as a gift-book with marginal decorations in tint of the many situations described. A good part of the love story plays among theatrical people, and the first scene is lighted with the candles of the Old Park Theatre.

These rambles of the author and artist, extending over several years of wandering and residence in Normandy, are here described with the addition of a few facts of history and romance, but not at all in the guide-book style. A series of appendices contains useful maps, tables of railroad fares, the metric system with its English weights and measures equivalents, and an index of places. The book is made in gift-book style with decorated cover, picture end-papers and many full-page half-tone illustrations.

Begins at Santa Cruz de Teneriffe where a sick man bound for Rio Janeiro is put ashore and dies in the only hotel. The landlord recognizing baggage as kin to some left on his hands by absconding guests in other days, exchanges the bags and thus lays the foundation for an intricate plot in which a great Portuguese singer takes a leading part. The scene is chiefly Rio Janeiro and adjacent parts.

Mitchell, Silas Weir, M.D. Constance Trescott: a novel. N. Y., Century Co., 1905. [Mr.] c. 3+384 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

A young Northern officer just after the close of the Civil War, settled in a Southern city with his bride. They were from Boston and both had pronounced views regarding the war, and found themselves up against prejudices equally as strong as their own. The young man is a lawyer, and in the settlement of some land claims he is shot—"murdered" his wife says. This tragedy is the motive of the book; the fierce vendetta it generates in the woman's character, her bitter revenge and strange mental development are analyzed and described as only a physician of Dr. Mitchell's standing and research could portray them.

The materials for these volumes are of two kinds. "On the one hand," the editor says, "I have set down passages of verse and prose in which some text of this book of the Bible has been used or applied in what appears to be a forcible or notable manner. Some of these are drawn from history and biography, others from general literature. In the second place, I have admitted passages which develop aptly and freshly not the words but the idea of a Biblical verse. It is hoped that both classes of illustrations may prove interesting to the ordinary reader by enriching the associations and eliciting the significance of the Bible."

The title of the novel was taken, says Miss Montréor in the preface, from R. L. Stevenson's poem. She likewise intimates that the part of the doctor who figures in her story under the same name was suggested by a refrain of this poem. The scene is Durham, in Yorkshire. The characters are De Growchy, the impetuous scion of the Yellow House, Emma, his religious and self-sufficient wife, Mr. Knight, a middle class Englishman, Mademoiselle Du Clos, a clever French woman, Fenronime, an adopted daughter, Miss MacIlvert, a lachrymose lady, and last but not least, Doctor MacIlvert, who, like Shakespeare's hero, plays many parts.

Lord Byron's early love for his cousin, Mary Chaworth, is the subject of this novel. His first meeting with her, when both are but boy and girl, is described in the opening chapters; his discovery that she is about to marry another man, their separation and his despair follow. Afterward he is shown as the idol of London society, in love with Lady Caroline Lamb, and the centre of a circle of great literary lights in which Madame De Stael, Moore, Sheridan and many others equally famous are included. The book ends with Byron's meeting again with Mary Chaworth and their premeditated elopement, with the tragedy that prevents it.

"In this edition we have adhered to the design of the editions of 1895 and 1900, to present the facts leading to a useful knowledge of mineralogy in such a manner that the student in the technical school and the professional man in the field may readily learn to recognize, or when necessary to determine, all important minerals. Part 1, Crystallography has been entirely rewritten and attempt has been made to subordinate the study of models to the study of actual crystals. The introductory part of Part 3, Descriptive mineralogy, has been revised and rewritten, and a chapter added upon 'occurrence and origin of minerals' and the discussion of chemical composition, etc., has been made more thorough. The descriptions of species, statistics, etc., are brought to date."—Preface.

Mother-Light (The). N. Y., Appleton, 1905. c. 2+296 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A young actress upon her return from a New York theatre where she has played a minor part finds her child dead. In her despair she wanders about the streets and meets an old friend who leads her to the Temple of the Mother-Light supposed to be somewhere in New Jersey. Here many new thoughts are unfolded and there are long discussions upon the effects of love, superstition, voluntary and involuntary delusions. The young actress becomes the Mother-Light and fights a severe battle with selfish human love before she sacrifices herself for the good of the new faith. Many of the doctrines voiced are those of Christian Science.

Mott, Lawrence. Jules of the great heart, "free" trapper and outlaw in the Hudson Bay region in the early days; with frontispiece by F. E. Schoonover. N. Y., Century Co., 1905. c. 6+303 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Jules Verbeaux was a French Canadian trapper, a sort of Robin Hood, whom the great Hudson Bay Company had reason to dread in the eighteenth century for his various pranks. In all his different adventures he suffered from loneliness and heart-sickness as he battled with fierce storms, eluded the vengeance of the company officials and faced the onslaughts of half-breed French and Indian trappers. The author is a grandson of Jordan L. Mott, the well-known iron founder.

- Murfree, Mary Noailles, ["Charles Egbert Craddock," pseud.] The storm centre: a novel. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. c. 4+351 p. D. cl., †$1.50.
During the Civil War a young Federal officer recovering from a wound was taken into the family of his father's old friend, a Tennessee judge whose sympathies were all with the Southern cause. The home life described is ideal. The grand-children and a widowed niece look after the judge's comfort. At last the house becomes the "storm centre" of a Union and Confederate battle. The consequences ending in a Court Martial trial of the hero are worked into a vivid tale.

Myers, W: Wilshire. Hotep: a dream of the Nile. Cin., Robert Clarke Co., 1905. 15+356 p. il. D. cl., *$1.50 net.

A tale of Egypt based on the theory of reincarnation. The daughter of the last of Egypt's shepherd kings and a young Hebrew are taken prisoner by the Theban conqueror and conveyed to Thebes. The princess is later offered by her captors as a sacrifice to the Nile, and thus closes book one. Hundreds of years later when Mohammedans are rulers in Egypt, the souls of the princess, her Hebrew lover, her father, the king, and Hotep, the high priest, take human form again, and the mystery of reincarnation, dimly realized by each one of them, is substantiated by means of a discovered papyrus roll.

A story of life in northern Colorado, Wyoming and Montana in the early seventies. The author is the editor and publisher of several agricultural journals. His early days were lived in the Cache la Poudre country. In one way the book is unique. In place of wordy descriptions Mr. Myrick has substituted pictures reproduced from oil paintings made by leading artists.

Elijah Berl is a strictly orthodox Puritan who has drifted to California with his young wife and has become an enthusiast on the subject of irrigation and orange growing. His love of money gets the best of his religious scruples and as a stockholder in a great syndicate he yields to temptation. A very gifted bookkeeper and typewriter and an old-time friend and engineer force Elijah to repent and make restitution. The end is dramatic. A true picture of wild speculation in the West.

A fictitious correspondence consisting of seventy-five letters addressed to several United States Senators, some members of the cabinet, two well-known sporting men, a prominent Afro-American citizen and others notable in public and private life. In these letters supposed to be dated from the Executive Mansion, the alleged writer, whose identity is evident, openly declares an intention of removing furnishings and time-honored paintings from the White House. He also expresses unconventional opinions about athletic sports, and discusses his own social ambitions and political interests in common with the race question and other issues of the day. The book is a satire on the present administration.

A man who had made riches and reputation as a "cattle king" let his discontented wife go on an indefinite trip to Europe. She was reported drowned. He married an ideal woman and within a year his first wife returned. The second wife takes up her abode in the West, as her own people discard her, and spends her life helping fight the battles against the cattle king's enemies. The end is happy after much tribulation and by aid of much exciting horsemanship.

A course of six lectures delivered in Philadelphia by the rector of the Holy Trinity Church, New York. The line of argument followed is given as follows: "I shall try to show that a written revelation necessarily involves temporary features, to be reckoned with and discarded. Taking up the Person of Christ, of whose work and word the revelation is witness, I shall ask you to study the temporary features involved of necessity in the Incarnation, and then those to be found and separated from the very Teachings of Christ Himself. The methods and conclusions of St. Paul's Theology will be our next study. . . ."

By the terms of his grandfather's will, Jack Glenarm, a confirmed globe-trotter, was to spend one year shut up in a candle-lighted palace in Indiana. If he left his place of exile all his money would go to a beautiful strange girl. If he married the girl the money would go to charity. Jack's splendid prison proves full of mysteries, and the greatest of surprises changes all the conditions.

Marcus Whitman was born in New York State in 1802. In 1836 he was sent by the American Board to Oregon as missionary physician. He studied conditions, then went to Washington and pleaded with the government to secure Oregon for the United States. To prove it feasible he started with a train of wagons and settlers for the Far Northwest. He was murdered by Indians in 1847. Author writes enthusiastically of the great work done by the missionaries half a century ago.

Messrs. Joseffs, Arn & Schlange, London merchants, have built a ship in which all kinds of patents and inventions are to take the place of sailors. The few needed are to be paid upon a cooperative plan. An old style captain and a first-class Scotch engineer sail the ship and find it impossible to run her in safety manned by machinery, patents and labour-saving appliances and a crew that speaks in tongues of which the officers know nothing. Her adventures make a story in which no woman appears.

- Norris, W. E. Barham of Beltana. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1905. c. '04. 4+334 p. D. cl., $1.50.
Richard Barham of Beltana, rich beyond "the dreams of avarice," is a native of Tasmania and an imperious, self-made man, born to rule. His father was known to be a convicted felon, but believed by his son and others to be an innocent man and as having been made the scapegoat of the son of a worthless scion of an aristocratic house. This taint has clung to the family always, particularly affecting the fortunes of the son and daughter. A visit to England by Mr. Barham and his children has startling results. The story of the grandfather unexpectedly revived seems to be an insuperable bar in the love affairs of the children. The denouement is cleverly worked out, and all ends well.
- Norris, W. E. An embarrassing orphan. Phil., J. C. Winston Co., [1905.] c. '04. 3+330 p. D. (Griffin ser.) cl., $1.
An immensely wealthy African mine owner, an American with a daughter who scarcely knows him, as she has spent her young life in a convent, suddenly claims kinship with Sir Edward and Lady Denne at their house in London. He asks that they will be the guardians of his daughter Elsie while he is in South America on business, and they grant his request. He dies shortly afterward, leaving a great fortune to his daughter under certain conditions, she being by his will kept ignorant of her great wealth. Of course everything depends upon her marriage and she becomes the centre of many intrigues.

Dr. North, familiarly and lovingly known as "Old Greek," was professor of Greek in Hamilton College (Clinton, N. Y.), during fifty-eight years, his long and useful life having been brought to a close in 1903. The intimate personal relations between professor and student possible in a small college are here exemplified. The author has made this work largely autobiographical—Dr. North's life as written by himself in poem, journal, lecture, and reminiscence. Incidentally the book may be considered as a plea for the restoration of the classics in the modern curriculum.

Older, Mrs. Fremont. The giants. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. [S.] c. 3+285 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The story opens in Southern California some years back. A settler, almost ruined, "strikes oil" upon his property and all looks bright until the Standard Oil machinations lead to the loss of everything, even the settler's life. His son arrives in New York to earn a living and meets the head of the oil combination who offers him a fine position, as he has brains; the one requisite for success in the intricate scheme of monopoly. The son refuses and fights all his life to kill the giant of monopoly by opposing the giant of true American independence. Many facts of recent business transactions are realistically worked into an intricate plot.

Opal (The) : a novel. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. [F.] c. 4+174 p. i il. D. cl., $1.25.

"The Opal" was a wonderfully beautiful girl who lacked strength of mind and character and took her thoughts and feelings from her environment. She agreed with every one, took interest in all people and seemed to radiate color and expression. She married the wrong man and almost broke her best friend's heart. The story is full of psychology and none of the problems are finally solved. The scene is laid in Boston among society people.

A great French actor is the deus ex machina in an intricate plot, in which for the sake of a long-lost love he watches over her daughter to the extent of doing murder to rescue her from persecution. The girl comes under the guardianship of three young London bachelors and improves them all. She turns out to be of high degree, the granddaughter of a German king. Her aunt has tried to gain her position and money for her own child. At all moments the master mummer rules her fate until he leaves her truly happy.

Oppenheim, E. Phillips. Mysterious Mr. Sabin; il. by J. Ambrose Walton. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1905. c. 2-397 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The mysterious hero appears as a man of sixty with his niece, in London society. A complicated and ingenious plot dwells particularly upon the likelihood of war between Germany and England and the equal likelihood of the Republic of France again becoming a monarchy. The various intrigues introduce characters that as employees of others and on their own responsibility do much clever detective work. The conversations on modern diplomacy and the characteristics of the great world nations are terse and clever.

Prince Louis Napoleon's escape from the fortress at Ham and his dramatic appearance in London at the house of Count D'Orsay is the subject of the opening chapter. The novel deal with the love affair and final marriage of Napoleon III. and Mademoiselle de Montijo. The violet, the flower of the Bonapartes, is "the flower of destiny," and plays its part in the graceful romance. The page is encircled with a frame in violet tint, characteristic in design.

Orczy, (Baroness —.) The scarlet pimpernel. N. Y., Putnam, 1905. 8+312 p. il. D. cl., †$1.50.

A romance of the French Revolution, 1792-3. The "Scarlet Pimpernel" was the mysterious chief of a daring band of young Englishmen who worked to rescue the Emigré nobles from the French Terrorists. The scene shifts between Paris and London. The French heroine is as brave and enthusiastic as the English hero. The author also produced her story as a play in London, and the illustrations are photographs of the scenes and actors. She dedicates her novel to Julia Neilson and Fred Terry who made its success as a play.

The step-son of Robert L. Stevenson has written a rollicking story of ninety days sport in England. "Baby Bullet," is a little French automobile in which two southern California ladies take their vacation. Baby Bullet brought four people together and intertwined the threads of their lives. The author makes clear that "within the ranks of the Gasolene Brotherhood there exists a feeling only comparable to the primitive church. . . . Rank is forgotten in the common danger and the common need."

Story of the struggle between the good and evil in a man born to high rank and fortune. Löic de Kergoat, a young Briton nobleman, is driven from home and started on the downward path by his mother, a beautiful, capricious, domineering, passionate woman, who alternately spoils or tyrannizes over her son. He becomes involved with a common Breton girl, who throws herself on his mercy and for whom he sacrifices everything. The years bring poverty and disgrace from which he is at last rescued by his sister who has been the one good influence in his life. The scenes are laid in Brittany and in New York. Mrs. Owen is best known as the author of "The martyrdom of an empress."

The author of the novels "When wilderness was king," "A sword of the old frontier," etc., states in the introduction that he has not intended to make this history scholastic nor based on original research; but rather to render Illinois history interesting "to the many who seldom discover it to be so." Beginning with the remains of the mound-builders, he writes of the Indian tribes and their conflicts; of the first explorers and missionaries, Tonty, La Salle, Marquette and others; of the French and Spanish settlements, of John Rogers Clark; of Illinois' part in the Revolution, the war of 1812 and the Civil War; of the Mormon settlement at Nauvoo, and of old time preachers and border characters, historic spots and modern towns.

There are four pictures in colors by the artist, acknowledged among the greatest illustrators of the Colonial period. The historical background of the French and Indian war is accurate in details.

"This dictionary is the first outcome of a desire on the part of the publishers to place on the market a series of somewhat uniform bilingual dictionaries in which the pronunciations of the words should be indicated, and a desire on my part to produce a system of dictionaries in which the like phenomena of all languages should be expressed by like symbols, classified by like terms, and treated in like manner. The present volume is the first of a series of general bilingual dictionaries, the next five of which are to be as follows: German-English and English-German, Latin-English and English-Latin, Spanish-English and English-Spanish, Greek-English and English-Greek, Italian-English and English-Italian."—Preface by Rob. Central Pennsylvania is the setting of this characteristic story of a "Pennsylvania Dutch" community, quaint in its customs and remote in many ways from ordinary American village life. A valley among the Seven Mountains is the home of the old squire, who exerts a sort of rude feudal sway over the region. His enemies, his fate, the curse that belongs to the House of the Black Ring, and how these affect the life and love story of his daughter, make a story of many stirring incidents, which has humor as well as dramatic force.

In his previous book, "Jesus Christ and the social question," Prof. Peabody has considered the teaching of Jesus in relation to some of the problems of modern life. Here, however, it is applied to the personal character, by the upbuilding of which the greatest good will come to the world at large. Taking the character of Christ as the perfect type, the author examines the roots of Christian character, its growth, its personal and social consequences and the ascent of ethics and descent of faith. In short, this is a study of Christian ethics.

alike. Other members of the House of Hawley also enjoy and suffer keenly, and the political and social conditions of the borderland of Missouri are described with spirit.

giving the legendary tale of the settlement of the country by the forefathers of the local Indian tribe.
"The parson's Rose," a shorter poem, is another Wil-braham story, elaborated into verse.

Their historic leader, Ethan Allen, plays a leading part in this story of a noble young girl's devotion to country and family during Revolutionary days.

spiritism, oriental and occidental occultism.
3d ed. Battle Creek, Mich., Peebles Medical Institute, [1905.] 382 p. por. O. cl., $1.

The writer has studied the theories of spiritualism in all the lands of the world. He describes the beliefs held about demons, obsessions and influences.
He believes a new time is at hand and that our spiritual lives will be affected more and more by "the principles of a wiser-world brotherhood, one uplifting aim, altruism; one all-embracing religion, the religion of love."

curse and a menace to personal liberty; with statistics showing its dangers and criminality. [Battle Creek, Mich., Peebles Medical
Institute, 1905.] 326 p. por. O. cl., $1.

The author holds the theory of vaccination to be untenable and its practice beset with severe physical danger. But he is specially bitter against the legislation that makes this law compulsory and robs free-born citizens of the right to refuse to comply with a practice in which they have no faith. He classes vaccination with all other forms of ignorance and superstition.

A companion volume to the "Trees and shrubs of Prospect Park." Identification is effected by locating representative types clearly and sharply on the maps and then the descriptive text points out the salient features of each tree and shrub to make this identification sure. Each of the sixteen excellent maps is followed by a list of the common and the foreign names of the plants it shows. A very useful list of books is given in which the rambler can follow up the knowledge gained if his object is botanical study of wider reach. Especially needed by the non-technical city nature lover.

The time covered by the story is the hundred days between Napoleon's escape from Elbe and his triumphal return to Paris, and his defeat at Waterloo. Napoleon appears several times in the story, but the narrative is confined chiefly to the adventures of an English officer, who has sought sanctuary in France, after a duel, in which he believes he has killed his adversary, and a beautiful French girl belonging to a prominent Bourbon family, who has incurred the enmity of her relatives through her devotion to Napoleon, whom she serves in the disguise of a man, in carrying important papers, etc. She has many thrilling escapes and adventures in which the Englishman plays a part.

The little Canadian town of Waterloo is the scene. The son of a sour old village miser with the soul of a poet fights many unpleasant happenings before he wins the girl who has been so good an influence in her circle. In the little village of Waterloo the future writer was quite alone in his search for the ideal, but he came out conqueror in the "Greater Waterloo."

Thanksgiving-Day, November 30, is the 250th anniversary of the settling of the Jews in America. In "Justice to the Jew," and "The Jew as a patriot" the author has shown his conviction that the Jews should rank among the better element of citizenship. He considers the faults of the Jews can be traced to his fellow citizens. Jews are healthy, long-lived and law-abiding and their family life is exemplary.

Phillips, H: Wallace. Plain Mary Smith: a romance of Red Saunders; il. by Martin Justice. N. Y., Century Co., 1905. [O.] c. 4+218 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Red Saunders here tells the story in his own picturesque style of his early years at home when he was qualifying to become the village pride, and of his hurried departure by sailing vessel for Panama. On shipboard he becomes involved with a pair of lovers, one of whom is "plain Mary Smith." Arrived in Panama, this eighteen-year-old giant is employed on a ranch, and of course gets mixed up with a small revolution and also plays the part of good angel to the lovers in unmasking the villain, a hypocritical missionary.

Phillipotts, Eden. The secret woman. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. [Ja.] c. 8+385 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The gloom of a shocking domestic tragedy casts a shadow over a strongly written novel of the Dartmoor country of western England. The characters are small farmers and their families and laboring men. A murder that seems to have some extenuating circumstances brings desolation and misery to a once happy home. A good woman, somewhat hard and unlovely, a weak and unfaithful husband, his mistress, a young woman half his age, and his two sons are the chief characters. The beautiful Devon woods are the background to many violent scenes of love and hatred.

A half-dozen wholly honest characters are used to show that the great needs of human nature are the same in all. The details of external methods of religious worship are a matter of circumstances and opportunity. Catholicism and Methodism are the powers arraigned against each other in the persons of a bishop, two priests and a methodist minister. The guiding spirits for peace are a priest's mother, the Methodist's sister who becomes a Catholic and the bishop's niece who becomes a Methodist. Nova Scotia is the scene.

The author, in making his studies for the life of Aaron Burr he is writing, has already made use of much romantic material in "Blennerhassett" and "The Climax. The present story should be read first in point of events commemorated. The author holds Aaron Burr to be a much maligned hero and draws a dark picture of Alexander Hamilton. The story starts in Litchfield, Connecticut, on the evening of the Battle of Bunker Hill, when Aaron Burr, a boy of nineteen, made the call to arms to his immediate neighbors. His days as aide-de-camp to Washington are described in detail.

Pier, Arthur Stanwood. The ancient grudge. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. c. 4+477 p. D. cl., $1.50.

At a water carnival in Massachusetts, Floyd Halkett saves the life of Stewart Lee. Later the young men go to Harvard University and Stewart resents all advice from Halkett, always bearing him a grudge because he thinks Halkett presumes on having saved his life. The boys love the same girl and Stewart Lee marries her. Halkett's grandfather has made a fortune in steel manufacturing. The young man enters the works at the lowest round and works up. Incidentally the story tells much of labor and capital and modern monopoly methods. The climax is brought about by Stewart Lee who has become an architect and has stooped to dishonest trickery.

The story of events transpiring from 1886 to 1900 is told by typical cowboy in cowboy English. This "Chalkeye" has much to do with the shaping of Curly's remarkable life.

A good-natured burlesque of the Sherlock Holmes stories. A sedate London stock-broker, afflicted with hay fever, takes a friend's remedy and is reduced to a state of mind that makes him act a most remarkable part in a social gathering and in a piece of detective work. Some diamonds and spoons have disappeared and, in tracing the thief, detectives, mummies, bicycles, motor cars and young lovers get into inextricable confusion.

Poole, Ernest. Katharine Breshkovsky, "for Russia's freedom"; reprinted by permission of The Outlook. Chic., C. H. Kerr & Co., 1904. 29 p. D. pap., 10 c.

A brief sketch of the life of Katharine Breshkovsky, a heroic Russian woman of 61, who is still an active figure in the Russian Revolutionary movement. The writer secured the story from her own lips. She was the daughter of a nobleman; first an earnest philanthropist and then a revolutionist, hard labor convict and exile for 23 years in Siberia; now she has again plunged into the dangerous struggle for freedom.

Poor, Agnes Blake. Under guiding stars: a Massachusetts story of the century end. N. Y., Putnam, 1905. c. 5+324 p. D. cl., †$1.25.

A typical New England town is the scene. The chief characters are the rich more or less related "upper ten" and the family of a mental healer who is an "impossible" woman controlled a little by her daughter. This daughter is a beautiful, capable, uneducated girl of fine character who is shop-girl in the village dry-goods store. The fortunes of Roland Wentworth and Bertha the seer's daughter become one; a marriage takes place and Bertha becomes head of the biggest house in town. She is a fine woman and has good influence in her new surroundings. By the author of "Boston neighbors."

The hero "Freckles," comes into the story as a tramp seeking work in a western lumber camp. He is little more than a boy, with a pathetic face and an equally pathetic story, both of which appeal strongly to Mr. McLean, an educated Scotchman the field manager of the Grand Rapids Lumber Company. He employs "Freckles" to help watch the valuable timber his men are cutting down. "Freckles'" mental development in contact with the wild nature of his environment is graphically told. His love story is romantic, and his final quest for his real name and family crowned with success.

Post, Mrs. Emily Price. Purple and fine linen. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. [O.] c. 346 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

The son of one of New York's richest "millionaires" is supposed to have reached nearly forty years of age and to have found his great interest in study of electricity, mechanics, railroads, etc. His father insists upon his marrying and he chooses wisely a girl of fine family and great personal charm. They travel, return to their beautiful home at Newport, then to New York. The husband overloads his wife with gifts, but shows he does not need her companionship. The wild extravagance and unrest of the rich and idle are pictured, but the author works toward a logical and happy ending.

Caleb Powers, arrested five years ago charged with the murder of Governor Goebel of Kentucky, is still in jail in Frankfort, Ky. Powers claims he is innocent and the victim of a conspiracy which he now makes public in this autobiography. Powers was born in Kentucky in 1869 and has earned a living as a lawyer, taking great interest in politics. In 1899 the election laws of Kentucky were changed by the Goebel election bill, and when Senator Goebel was elected governor it led to much dispute and finally to his murder.

First volume covers from earliest accounts, 600 B.C.-A.D. 1436. The author was also the compositor, stereotyper and printer of his work. To make the necessary studies required for an exhaustive work on the many little principalities that have come under Austrian rule requires a knowledge of the German, Bohemian, Hungarian and Slavonic languages. The work is timely as the Austria-Hungarian empire is held together by gradually loosening bonds. The personality of Francis Josef is of these the strongest. Author is librarian, equipment department, Navy Yard, Brooklyn.

The first volume in the new series of French classics for English readers is devoted to Rabelais' "Gargantua and Pantagruel." Great skill and discrimination have been shown in the handling of this famous extravaganza, which is presented in the picturesque 17th century translation of Urquhart and Motteux. The editions have aimed to preserve intact the romance, with its wit, human interest, and historical satire and to omit only the long, dry, ethical and philosophical dissertations, which interfere with the appreciation of the story. There is a brief bibliography and an interesting introduction sketching Rabelais' life and giving an estimate of his work.

She finds her oldest cousin, a man of twenty-six, fighting against the verdict that his lungs are threatened, and she sets herself the task of cheering him up, encouraging him to live. All the young people have many good times together, and the autumn brings a happy outlook to the future.

Ray, Anna Chapin, and Fuller, Hamilton Brock. On the firing line: a romance of South Africa. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1905. c. 3+289 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A young Canadian of good social position and with wealthy parents desires to cast his lot in with his English brethren in South Africa. The time is 1901, and the story opens on a steamer bound for Cape Town. The romance of Harvard Weldon begins here with his meeting with Ethel Dent, a young English girl who has been at school in England. Weldon enlists as a private in a cavalry regiment and does heroic work in the Transvaal and afterward in the army of the Orange River Colony. The scenes take in battlefields, camp life, life in the hospital ward, and the characters are English officers, troopers, nurses, natives, etc. The homely incidents are presented with an epigrammatic dialogue that makes them full of charm.

A working over of the sketches that appeared in the Saturday Evening Post into a novel holding up by satirical comment the sordid, unnatural and un-American conditions that obtain among the rich people of New York City. The scene is chiefly the Waldorf-Astoria where the Southern Colonel and his adopted son meet a widow and her niece who still have the attributes of old-fashioned, lovable, womanly women. The book is full of epigrammatic comment on the superficiality and lack of individuality of present day New Yorkers.

A dispassionate survey from a Southerner's standpoint of the causes of the Civil War and its consequences. The writer strives to make both sides see that both sides were conscientious, patriotic and lovable. A great part of the book is devoted to the problem of the freed negro. The author thinks a state should be given over to the colored race and let them work out their own salvation, or, let them be returned to Africa.

The title of the book stands for a quaint old house, suggestive in its appearance of a "Jack o' Lantern," which a New York newspaper man inherits from a queer old uncle whom he had never seen, and who though dead, impresses his individuality upon the whole story. He, the newspaper man, takes his bride to his new home at the end of their honeymoon, to make its acquaintance, and the most remarkable and amusing sequence of events follow. Money is found in books and secret drawers, diamonds in old mattresses; an uncanny cat and a ghostly looking servant maid add to the variety of things; numerous relatives of the dead man appear upon the scene and declare their intention of spending the summer; before the climax is reached, life for the bride seems scarcely worth living. The fun keeps up to the very end.

A sequel to "Mrs. Tree" (July 12, 1902) laid in the seaboard New England village that was the scene of "Geoffrey Strong" (August 17, 1901.) At the age of 102 the long widowed sea-captain's wife, who had been autocrat of the little town for most of the life-time of her neighbors, died quietly and left a will that equally surprised those who benefited and those who were disappointed. The consequences of this will affected the lives of many characters described with insight and humor. Old fashioned love triumphs after much tribulation.

This revision was undertaken by Harvard University because of an unaccountable discrepancy which appeared in the composition of a sample of very pure sodic bromide as compared with the results of Jean Servais Stas in his classical work on the subject. Regretfully the writers admit that a critical study of the work of Stas upon sodium in particular reveals several possibilities of error and at least one inconsistency. Twelve very important points revealed by the investigation are given in the summary of the treatise.

The author is pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, New York City. In his ethical and practical rather than doctrinal treatment he maintains that in the conflicts attending and following the Protestant Reformation those men who made much of God's sovereignty were also the successful champions of human freedom. He shows that the same forces still battle and that the like faith may be needed again. He traces to the Calvinistic faith of Holland and Scotland that Europe and America are free today to make their own laws and worship God in their own thoughts and their own prayers.

A story of a Southern household in the bitterest days of the Civil War, picturing the brave endurance of privation in a besieged city, the suffering and humiliations of conquest, and the grim struggle of battle. The love story is that of a Southern girl whose half acknowledged engagement to her childhood's comrade is broken down and forgotten in the love awakened by one of the Yankee invaders; but beneath this runs a thread of deeper plot, which affords an unexpected ending.

"Lady Penelope Brading said that she would tolerate no publicity about her wedding; it should take place with the utmost secrecy, and, furthermore, her husband's identity should not be divulged. She was as good as her word, and Mr. Morley Roberts has based his amusing and ingenious extravaganza of 300 pages on the resultant complications and the efforts of a troop of lovers, motor-car owners, and relations, not to mention 'the dear Bishop,' to discover (1) whether Penelope was married, or a 'story-teller'; (2) who her mysterious partner was; and (3) whether the baby was 'adopted' or otherwise."—London Literary World.

Roberts, Theodore. Brothers of peril: a story of old Newfoundland; il. by H. C. Edwards. Bost., L. C. Page & Co., 1905. [Je.] c. 7+327 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Deals with a now distinct race, the Beothic Indians of the 16th century, the original inhabitants of Newfoundland when it was only a fishing station for the fleets of the old world. A young English cavalier left behind on the island meets an Englishman hiding from the law with his daughter and servants. A French adventurer and many French pirates and perilous adventures by land and sea make a story of breathless interest full of up-to-date human nature.

The author of "The magnetic north" now writes a startling tale of a highly emotional, intellectual girl who allows herself to be completely dominated by the uncontrolled forceful personality of a successful physician. Her first love was a German prince, but she could not descend to a morganatic marriage and gave him up. Later she submits to the "rest-cure" ordered by the physician known as "a dark lantern." The consequences are told in strong, plain language. The girl as mistress and wife gives up all individuality and totally sacrifices her life to an utterly selfish brutal nature. The scene shifts between London and a wild place on the English coast.

Thomas H. Benton now one of the almost forgotten figures in American political life, sat for thirty consecutive years in the United States Senate. He died just before the Civil War, and died fighting for the preservation of the Union. His political career began with the passage of the Missouri Compromise and practically closed with its repeal. It is to the extraordinary career of this man that this volume is dedicated. It is one of the opening volumes of a new series, to embrace biographies of prominent men North and South, who took part in the great sectional struggle. In this series, the publishers state, the Civil War will not be treated as a rebellion. Bibliography (2 p.).

Two stories of mystery. Into the house in the mist a traveller entered to avoid the gloomy weather and found it occupied by a lawyer awaiting the relatives of a man who had left a trouble-breeding will. "The ruby and the caldron" is a detective story of a grand ball given at the Evergreens, and of the loss of a large ruby belonging to a senator's wife in whose honor the ball was given.

"The millionaire baby," Mrs. Rohlfs's latest detective story, is apparently founded on an incident of real life. The scenes are the suburbs of New York City and in adjacent towns on the Hudson. The principal characters are evidently living and well-known people whose identities are concealed under fictitious names. The plot is a deep one, involving a case of child abduction, also the honor and reputations of the men and women who play prominent parts.

Giovanni Rosadi, a famous criminal lawyer and parliamentary leader of Italy, writes a new life of Jesus, chiefly from the point of view of his trial and the facts leading up to it. He dwells with sympathetic indignation upon its unfairness and condemns it as a miscarriage of justice, judged merely by the standard of Roman law. He also sees in it the most notable example of the typical injustice of society, striving to protect its selfish interests. The work has already been translated into several languages.

The history of carbonic acid in medicine is very little known. At least text-books hardly speak of it. The material for the historical sketch here given the writer found in great part in French and German books not translated into English. Among the transactions of the Congress of Balneologists, which met in Berlin from March 9 to March 13, 1905, perhaps the most important were the papers read by Homberger and Fellner on the effect of carbonic-acid baths. Dr. Rose availed himself of these publications; they reached him just before he had finished his manuscript.

A young carpenter joined a German socialist society and was selected to fire the shot at the Chancellor. He was condemned to death. A priest tried to comfort him, but the poor condemned man thought only of his mother's history of the Savior and comforted himself by writing it out as he remembered it. After six weeks it was done, then came the end. The book has been a literary sensation in Germany. The author is peasant born, a sort of modern apostle.

Theodora Varney, a North Dakota girl of twenty-six, left the western college where she was teaching and came to New York to make her living as a writer. In letters to her only brother and to women friends she tells her experiences in boarding-houses while her manuscripts keep coming back. She also becomes lecturer and the letters are full of bright thoughts on English writing authors. She almost marries a congressman for his money, but repents and goes through much hard thinking. A faithful boy lover, Latin professor at Columbia University and a successful essayist and poet, finally makes her merge her literary ambitions in his career.

The master passion with Arthur Brown, the celebrated marine painter, was what he called the "wander-fever." This was what brought about all the remarkable adventures of this bright story. A telegram notifies him, when at Malaga, that an old classmate is at Gibraltar, on board a fine schooner, which he owns, where he is asked to join him. By accident two Americans, one a married woman and a trained nurse, the other daughter of a Smithsonian professor, also drift to the schooner. The result is a wonderful trip to the South Seas which is rich both in love making and startling episodes of various kinds.

The author of this old-fashioned tale of a deluded girl and her aristocratic lover was born in 1761 and died in 1824. She came to America in 1769. Through life she supported herself as teacher, author and actress. This book is supposed to have sold more copies than any novel excepting "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and chiefly in paper covered, cheap editions. It is thought so widely-read a book should be offered the public in good permanent shape. It is supposed Charlotte really existed. A tablet to her memory is placed in Trinity Churchyard, New York City.

The question of nutrition is of basic importance if we would have individual and national health. An examination of statistics, such as the author has conducted, shows that there is an alarming disregard among modern nations for the vital matter of food. Mr. Russell cites the opinions of scientists on the proper diet of man; tabulates the values of foods; outlines the diets of ancient peoples and gives in detail that of various modern countries; examines the effects of narcotics and stimulants, and notes the relation between diet and disease. His personal bias is in favor of a non-flesh diet.

The author belongs to the Wisconsin bar. He compares the philosophies of Hume, Kant, Spencer and John Fiske. He believes in a personal God, but he believes the great natural laws of matter are independent of the force that rules humanity and is wholly love. He does not think that anything which produces disaster in the world should be traced to a beneficial Creator. His points are closely argued.

A new life of Balzac based upon new material and fresh researches. The lives we are already acquainted with were written before the appearance of a work called "Lettres à l'Etrangère" a collection of letters written by him from 1833 to 1844 to Madame Hanska, the Polish lady who afterwards became his wife. The author largely makes use of this mine of biographical detail, the result being an extremely fresh and interesting work, of which Miss Sandars says: "It is not intended to add to the mass of criticism of Balzac's novels, being merely an attempt to portray the man as he was, and to sketch correctly a career which has been said to be more thrilling than a large proportion of novels."

Saunders, Marshall, [Margaret Marshall Saunders.] Princess Sukey: the story of a pigeon and her human friends. N. Y., Eaton & Mains, [1905.] c. 6+336 p. il. D. cl., $1.75 net.

Young Titus Sanicroft lived with his grandfather, Judge Sanicroft; the only other members of the family were "Higby," an odd but devoted old family servant, the housekeeper Mrs. Blodgett, and a pigeon christened "Princess Sukey," by Titus, who has introduced it into the household without his grandfather's knowledge. The little bird figures in many entertaining episodes, and the judge adds to the interest of the story first by adopting a small girl, and afterward an English boy of sixteen years.

Savage, Giles Christopher. Ophthalmic neuro-miology: a study of the normal and abnormal actions of the ocular muscles from the brain side of the question. Nashville, Tenn., [Giles Christopher Savage,] [1905.] c. 7+221 p. il. 8°, cl., $2.50.

Schaching, O. v., [pseud. for Victor Martin Otto Denk.] The violin maker; from the original of Otto von Schaching, by Sara Trainer Smith. N. Y., Benziger Bros., 1905. c. 156 p. il. S. cl., 45 c.

A story of the seventeenth century when the art of violin making reached its highest standard. A poor boy of the little German town of Mittenwald studied the art under Stainer, Amati, Scarlatti and others, then began making violins in his own town which still remains one of the most noted places for violin making.

Schaefer, Heinrich, comp. and tr. The songs of an Egyptian peasant; collected and translated into German by Heinrich Shaefer. English ed., by Frances Hart Breasted. N. Y., Lemcke & Buechner, 1904. 24+148 p. il. S. cl., $1.10.

This little collection doubtless makes known for the first time a considerable series of songs of the peasants of Upper Egypt.

Scheidler, Ethan. Manual of terreohmetry. South Pasadena, Cal., Ethan Scheidler, 1905. 44 p. il. S. cl., $2.

"Terreohmetry is the science of securing and comparing the electrical resistances of different earth-sections in the same vicinity for the purpose of determining whether bodies of mineral or mineral-bearing ores exist therein, their exact location, and other facts concerning them." The instrument by which this is done is called the terreohmeter, invented by Fred Harvey Brown. This little book details the various steps in surveying for minerals by means of this instrument.

Scherer, Ja. Augustin Brown. Young Japan: the story of the Japanese people, and especially of their educational development. Phil., Lippincott, 1905. [My.] c. 328 p. il. D. cl., $1.50 net.

A history of Japan, its people, institutions and customs, with a detailed account of their educational development. The author divides his history into three periods, viz., Early culture, extending from the first traditions of history to the introduction of Chinese civilization in the sixth century; 2, Adolescence, tracing the growth of the people under Chinese influence till the middle of the nineteenth century when western civilization was introduced; 3, School-days, describing the progress made under western influence. Mr. Scherer lived many years in Japan, where he was a teacher in a government school. This volume is designed as a companion of his earlier book, "Japan to-day."

Schillings, Carl G. With flash-light and rifle; photographing by flash-light at night the wild animal world of equatorial Africa; tr. and abridged by H: Zick. N. Y., Harper, 1905. 11+421 p. il. por. O. cl., $2 net.

The translator has adhered as closely as possible to the original, but has omitted certain portions of the narrative that were somewhat in the nature of repetitions or of slighter interest to American readers. Describes perfectly marvellous adventures in the African wilderness. The illustrations are reproductions of photographs all taken by the author, some of them at very long range. The author is a prominent German naturalist and he had nearly 100 assistants to help him in his great undertaking.

"Since this book," says the preface, "is designed for the pupil rather than for the teacher, all suggestions as to the teaching of English grammar have been conveyed rather by implication than by specific recommendation. The text itself is, however, designed to indicate a general method of presentation, variable in detail at the will of the individual teacher. Each chapter, it will be evident, presents not the material for any fixed number of class recitations, but rather a single subject, divisible according to the available time, the capacity of the students, and other practical considerations."

Scott, Leroy. The walking delegate; with frontispiece. N. Y., Doubleday, Page & Co., 1905. [My.] c. 7+372 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

The rise and fall of the "walking delegate" as we have all recently seen it in the real life of large cities, is delineated in a realistic story of the workman. "Buck Foley," the walking delegate, sells out his union, which is on a strike, for $50,000, in a compact with the "bosses." He has long been suspected by Tom Keating, a foreman and a man of strong character, who discovers his "graft" methods and exposes him. Pictures true to life are given of a workman's home and struggle with poverty and poor wages.

An exhaustive work on Antarctic discovery, telling of the expedition that sailed "farthest south" in 1901-1902 and spent two years below the Antarctic Circle. Many important discoveries were made in the sciences of geography, botany, etc., and wonderful accounts are given of the new lands, mountains and glaciers seen for the first time by civilized man. A very important feature of the book is the account of all the other voyages that had been made to those regions and a detailed account of all the discoveries of each expedition. Dedicated to Sir Clements Markham, the "father of the expedition."

Claims to be but "a mere sketch in outline." The author says further "it makes no pretence to original investigation, or even to an extended examination of the voluminous literature which deals with every part of its subject. It is an attempt to give a correct impression of Italian history as a whole, and employs details only here and there, and then merely for the sake of giving greater clearness to the general outline . . . I have laid emphasis upon the matters of greatest general interest, the Papacy, the Renaissance, and the Risorgimento: and my special object has been to put in high relief those achievements which make Italy so charming and so interesting to the world."

"The appearance of the present work is in response to the expressed desire of the teachers of dogmatic theology in a number of institutions in various portions of the church. . . . The 'Lehrbuch' of Dr. Seeberg has since its appearance (1895) been constantly used as a book of reference in our theological seminaries. The unchallenged pre-eminence of the author in this, his chosen field, the conservatism of his views, so well reflecting the spirit of our churches in America, and the condensation and lucidity of his style combine to commend his work as the most suitable for the purpose above indicated."—Translator's Preface.

A quiet story of a family of children whose father was the village doctor and whose mother was of the kind that made happy homes some thirty years ago. This family had travelled west after the war and the description of October among the fruit and harvests of the west are full of poetry. The story of child-life is told for grown up people whose hearts are young and who still remember the days when there was time to love everybody and to enjoy small things.

 Marriage is the irrational knot. The hero is an inventor who is wholly guided by self-interests. He marries an English lady and is soon bored by her conventionality and her total lack of sympathy in his life-work. The inventor's sister is a vaudeville actress. She refuses to marry but lives with a ne'er-do-well of the upper classes. Many characters are introduced and Shaw makes a repelling psychological study, full of wit and satire but hopelessly pessimistic. This story was written twenty-five years back and a new preface to the American edition gives its history.

A story of Queen Elizabeth's Court, the queen being shown in most attractive guise. The heroine appears as the daughter of the toll-taker of Old London Bridge, a strikingly handsome man known as a pardoned convict. He endeavors to force his daughter into a repulsive marriage and she takes refuge with the queen who promises her protection. Her father follows her and is mortally wounded fighting his way into the palace. Dying he tells his story—that he has noble blood in him, though an illegitimate son. His father's estates and name are restored to his daughter, who becomes one of the queen's maids, and the heroine of a tender love story.

Irish peasant life in the thirties and succeeding years when Fenian uprisings were convulsing the country, is here depicted. The plot hinges on the trial of one Edmund Connors, who was arrested with others on the evidence given by "informers." The undying hatred shown by the peasants for these "informers" even to the third generation is the motif of a tale through which runs a slight thread of romance. The Irish patriot Daniel O'Connell appears as advocate in the trial scene. The book is pronouncedly Catholic in tone.

Self-exiled from England at the age of twenty-six, Shelley never returned to that country, but spent the remaining four years of his life in Italy, where his muse found utterance and a congenial home. In the second year of exile he produced

"Promethens unbound" and "The Cenci." The compiler attempts through the grouping of letters and passages from the note-books with the poems to set Shelley's work in its original environment, so that the poems may be seen in the making.

A wild story of three women who loved the same artistic, visionary, erratic artist. He married one of them, loved another, and allowed himself to be specially influenced by the third. Letters and diaries tell the complicated plot. The scene shifts from the wild English coast of Norfolk to London and Paris. The "lost viol" was taken to be used as proof of a very startling situation. The gradual wearing off of the coast of England by the ocean leads to a peculiar combination of scenes.

Since Mrs. Gaskell wrote her life of Charlotte Brontë, much new material relating to the author of "Jane Eyre" and her family has come to light, but has not been in the interval, gathered into one brief narrative. While making use of a portion of this published material, Mr. Shorter has also added other unpublished material to his little book. To the Brontë enthusiast this will be easily discernible, as it is rich in fresh interest. Charlotte Brontë is permitted to tell her own story mostly in her own words through letters brought to light in recent years. With a story so often told, one could scarcely expect to find the literary charm and earnestness that invest this brief biography.

This biography is based on first-hand study of ancient authorities.

The automobile, "the latest achievement of that general movement throughout history which has for its object the annihilation of space by man," here finds comprehensive consideration. Its history since Roger Bacon in the 13th century foretold its invention is traced, and its various types—gasoline, electric steam—described. There are chapters on choosing, running and caring for the machine, and its use in commerce and sport; while an appendix contains a record of automobile legislation, the Gordon Bennett racing rules, brake test records, events in the Osmond-Daytona tournament, and a glossary of terms used in automobilism.

her mother's life after an operation by her mesmeric power. Further developments bring out the best in the girls' nature, strangely compounded of pure and evil traits.

Smith, Elmer Boyd. The story of Noah's ark: told and pictured by E. Boyd Smith. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. [N.] c. unp. obl. O. cl., $2 net.

Twenty-six full-page and double-page illustrations in colors picturing what must have happened when Noah was collecting all the animals of the earth under one roof, and was building a ship on land to gather them. Noah's experiences told in funny verses and paragraphs were exasperating and funny to the last degree. He contended with building strikes and was hopeless before the difficulty of keeping the cats from catching the mice, etc. Amusing to a man of fifty and a child of ten. A pictorial title and cover make a handsome holiday book.

Smith, Erwin F. Bacteria in relation to plant diseases. v. 1, Methods of work and general literature of bacteriology exclusive of plant diseases. Wash., D. C., Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1905. 12+285 p. il. por. Q. (Carnegie Institution of Washington publication, no. 27.) pap., $4.

"The subject of bacterial diseases of plants is older than the pomeplate method of Koch, but until recently our knowledge of it has been in a very chaotic state, it having been for the most part for twenty-five years a recognized but uncultivated field. In recent years, however, publications on plant bacteria have multiplied and they now amount to several hundred titles. The writer's studies of the bacteria themselves and of the diseases which they cause, as distinct from the literature of the subject, began in 1893. At that time there was very little reliable information on this subject. The literature is now more extensive, but it is nowhere gathered together in one place and properly summarized. It has seemed, therefore, for a long time, that a work of the scope of the treatise here presented might be clarifying and useful to many people. . . . More than 125 diseases will be treated or touched upon in this monograph. . . . The present volume contains an 'outline method of work' which was written up four years ago in connection with the investigations of the Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture. . . . The bibliography (64 p.) at the end of this volume covers the general subject and bacteriology, exclusive of plant diseases, and is arranged chronologically by subjects."—Preface.

Smith, Francis Hopkinson. At close range. N. Y., Scribner, 1905. [Mr.] c. 6+260 p. il. D. cl., *$1.50.

Mr. Hopkinson Smith's theory "that at the bottom of every heart-crucible choked with life's cinders there can almost always be found a drop of gold," finds illustration in these nine stories. Their names are: A night out; An extra blanket; A medal of honor; The Rajah of Bunglepore; The Soldo of the Castellanes; A point of honor; Simple folk; "Old Sunahine"; A pot of gain.

Smith, Francis Hopkinson. The wood fire in No. 3; il. in cols. by Alonzo Kimball. N. Y., Scribner, 1905. [O.] c. 6+298 p. D. cl., *$1.50.

Room number 3 was in an Old Studio Building. The painter, MacWhirter, could not exist without an open fire and a friend built him one. Around it soon gathered the inmates of the Old Building and their conversations and reminiscences passed many cosy evenings. MacWhirter gives the needed touch of romance, and when he finally takes leave of the wood-fire in No. 3 he goes in search of "the girl in the steamer chair."

Smith, Goldwin. Irish history and the Irish question. N. Y., McClure, Phillips & Co., 1905. [N.] 8+270 p. O. cl., $1.50 net.

Prof. Smith traces the general course of the history of Ireland and leads up to the present political situation. His interest and sympathy have been with Ireland throughout his life, as so many of his historical writings attest. In this survey of the Irish question, past and present, the author has tried to show what mistakes have been made both by the English and the Irish, and how a gradual improvement has been attained. He believes that a concession of larger self-government should be granted to Ireland rather than independence, for which the Nationalists clamor, or federation. The book is of special timeliness in view of the recent return to power of the Liberal party. Appendix contains an essay by Hugh J. McCann on "The Irish Land Code."

The subject is discussed in six chapters: 1, The individual? or the race? 2, Is the negro inferior? 3, Nurture? or nature? 4, Plea and counterplea; 5, A dip into the future; 6, The argument from numbers. The author believes the question of social, political and commercial equality for the negro, with its inevitable sequence of intermarriage, is the most important question at present before the American people. He discusses it scientifically and in the negative. He is professor at Tulane University, New Orleans.
- Smithers, Jos. P. Argument demonstrating existence of deity. N. Y., [Peter Eckler, 1905.] c. 8 p. D. pap., 15 c.
Matter and force or motion are the only entities of which science takes cognizance. The author thinks a third entity could be demonstrated as clearly as science demonstrates its theories and this entity the demonstrator would be justified in calling God. "Matter has either existed forever, or it was created at some time out of nothing. If it was created it required a Creator, who is God, but if it was not created it has existed forever," which scientists deny.

(Copyright Office bulletin, no. 8.) cl., 65 c.

Mr. Solberg, who is Register of Copyrights in the Library of Congress, says in a prefatory note: "In the following pages is presented an attempt at a complete bibliography of all the bills relating to copyright which have been introduced to Congress, the resolutions and laws which have been enacted, and those reports, petitions, memorials, messages, and miscellaneous copyright documents which have been printed, together with a complete chronological record of all action taken in Congress in any way relating to the subject of copyright, showing how each proposal has been dealt. In order to make the record as complete as possible, such bills as have been introduced in this present Congress and which are still pending are reprinted in full, with their accompanying reports."

The translation was made from the text in Vloten and Land's editions of Spinoza's works, published in 1895. In the introduction the translator has not attempted to make an exhaustive analysis of "Descartes' Philosophy," so much as to throw light upon Spinoza's Pantheism. Spinoza's thought and method of study of the Philosophy are the important points, and parts of his work have been condensed and parts omitted with a view of studying Spinoza more than Descartes.

A romantic story of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. The hero is an actual character, George Shannon, who was the only member of the famous expedition that was not of mature age. It is well established that young Shannon was born in Pennsylvania, but went with his parents to Ohio in early boyhood, where his father died. At the age of fourteen, the boy was sent back to Pennsylvania to attend school in Pittsburg, and at seventeen left school to join with Lewis and Clark. Mr. Sprague follows actual records of the party very closely, thereby making his story valuable without lessening its interest.

The story of two marriages. In one the husband was rich but allowed his wife no money for herself and forced her to stoop to deception to aid her mother and sister in their dire distress. In the other the woman was rich, but when she could not make her husband leave his position as bank-clerk and live on her income, became reckless and almost lost her reputation for one of the Ballingtons. How far a husband or wife must respect each other's individuality and grant each other freedom in the marriage relation is the author's study. The scene is laid in New York State.

Staunton, Schuyler. The fate of a crown. Chic., Reilly & Britton Co., 1905. c. 4-306 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Story of the revolt which overthrew the monarchy of Dom Pedro in Brazil. Robert Harcliffe, an American, is appointed secretary to Dom Miguel, the leader of the revolutionists. His journey from the coast to Dom Miguel's home in the interior is one of wild adventure and upon his arrival he becomes involved in a maze of intrigue culminating in the coup which makes Brazil a republic. The love interest centers in a beautiful ward of Dom Miguel, alternately doubted and adored by Harcliffe, because of her peculiar relations with Valcour, an adherent of the Emperor; but the mystery is cleared up when it is discovered that Valcour is a woman masquerading in men's clothes.

Stead, Alfred. Great Japan: a study of national efficiency; with a foreword by the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rosebery, K.G., etc. N. Y., J: Lane Co., 1906, [1905.] 12+483 p. O. cl., *$2.50 net.

Japan is the object-lesson of national efficiency. Lord Rosebery in his foreword points out how England won the empire and her liberties by genius and daring in an inefficient world and warns his countrymen that one or more nations are now striving after efficiency and that if England does not strive also she may lose her heritage. Character and courage cannot continue to storm and conquer trained efficiency from ruler to most menial office. Alfred Stead shows what a stimulating example has been set to the nations by Japan.

The American lectures on the history of religions are delivered under the auspices of the American committee for lectures on the history of religions. This committee was organized in 1892 for the purpose of instituting popular courses in the history of religions, similar to the English Hibbert lectures. These lectures are to be delivered annually by the best scholars in Europe and America, in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and other cities in the United States. The titles of the lectures contained are The Egyptian religion in the earliest times, The development of the Egyptian religion, Temples and ceremonies, Magic art—The life after death, Graves and burials—The Egyptian religion outside Egypt. In the last lecture both the Jewish and Christian idea of a resurrection is traced to the ancient Egyptian conception. Index.

A Jacobite officer fleeing from Scotland after the battle of Culloden, chances to see a pretty face in the inn and at once throws prudence to the winds in his determination to follow the girl. He traces her to her home, has several stolen interviews with her before he is discovered by her uncle and threatened with exposure. But half in jest the uncle offers the lover one week of Georgiana's society as his guest on the condition that he surrender himself to the law at the expiration of the time. The week comes to an end; the woman intervenes and a midnight flight and hairbreadth escapes lead to a happy ending.

Deals with a chapter in the history of Illinois and the early west. The story of the fierce, turbulent, and inconstant Fox tribe is traced, beginning with its migration from its early seat north from Montreal to Michigan, to Green Bay, and finally to its well-known home in southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois. The geography of the Northwest from 1680 to 1783 is presented in sixteen maps, some of them previously inaccessible to American readers.

Stewart, C: D: The fugitive blacksmith. N. Y., Century Co., 1905. [F.] c. 2+321 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

An Irishman named Finerty, with a rich brogue is the character who does the most speaking in this story of the Mississippi. Finerty is the keeper of the railroad sand house, where this racy story is racyly told; though only a railroad hand, he is overflowing with a quaint and comfortable philosophy, which makes all he says well worth reading. Whether in confiding in his wife, or entertaining tramps, or hobnobbing with "the fugitive blacksmith," he is most decidedly entertaining.

Stoddard, W: Osborn. The boy Lincoln. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. 6+248 p. D. cl., $1.50. Introduces Abe Lincoln as a boy of ten, living in a poor cabin in the Indiana backwoods; the coming of his step-mother at that period is the first helping hand he has known. Her influence upon his life is fully shown. The story ends with Lincoln about to be nominated for President of the United States.

Stoddard, W: Osborn. Dan Monroe: a story of Bunker Hill; il. by J. W. Kennedy. Bost., Lothrop Publishing Co., [1905.] c. 4+329 p. D. (Revolutionary ser.) cl., $1.25.

The first volume of a new historical series for boys, beginning with the battle of Lexington and ending with the battle of Bunker Hill. The historical outline is carefully preserved, even the names of the young heroes being authentic, Mr. Stoddard having derived them from trustworthy records. Dan Monroe, the drummer boy, and his companion, Nat Harrington, the fifer, are in all the leading events from the Concord fight, and enjoy themselves immensely. There is an old Quaker, who sells poultry to the "red-coats" in Boston and brings guns and ammunition to the rebels in Concord, who is quite a character.

Stodola, Aurel. Steam turbines, with an appendix on gas turbines and the future of heat engines; authorized tr. from the 2d enl. and rev. German ed. by L: C. Lowenstein. N. Y., D. Van Nostrand Co., 1905. c. 16+434 p. il. folding diagrs., O. cl., $4.50 net.

The translator says: "There are works on the steam turbine in English, but none in which the subject is so exhaustively treated from a purely scientific standpoint as in Prof. Stodola's work, now considered the standard authority on the subject in Europe; and there is no branch of machine design in which a complete knowledge of the theory involved is so necessary as in turbine design. For this reason, it is hoped that this volume will prove helpful, not only to designers and engineers, but to students of technical schools, and those interested generally in turbine development."

Stokeley, Edith Keeley, and Hurd, Marian Kent. Miss Billy: a neighborhood story; il. by C: Copeland. Bost., Lothrop Publishing Co., [1905.] 5+349 p. D. cl., $1.50. A story of what an irrepressible young woman accomplished in the neighborhood into which her family felt obliged to move for financial reasons. The street was a most unpromising one, but the happy, common-sense of Miss Billy and her quaint character and sayings made a remarkable change in the people she was brought into contact with. The authors are two bright women journalists of Dubuque, Iowa, and this is their first book.

Strang, Herbert. The adventures of Harry Rochester: a tale of the days of Marlborough and Eugene; il. by W: Rainey. N. Y., Putnam, 1905. 9+418 p. O. cl., †$1.50.

The war of the Spanish Succession is the historical background of this tale of fighting, plotting, and adventure. The Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene appear repeatedly as characters. Harry Rochester is a daring English boy under twenty, who is pursued by the enmity of an English squire. Rescued from a slave ship, he goes to Holland where he rescues helpless women, sees much fighting and at length gets to the bottom of a mystery and finds himself a rich English landowner—no longer a soldier of fortune.

Strang, Herbert. Kobo: a story of the Russo-Japanese war; il. by W: Rainey. N. Y., Putnam, 1905. 8+370 p. il. D. cl., †$1.50.

Kobo is a brave Japanese spy, whose adventures carry him through the many hard-fought fights on sea and land of the Russo-Japanese war. Bob Fawcett, a young Englishman sent to Japan on a mission connected with the Japanese navy, makes the acquaintance of Kobo, knowing nothing of his position and visits him at his home in Tokio and again comes in contact with him in the campaign. Most interesting details are given of the war and its many conflicts, especially of the Battle of the Yalu. Also describes general life in Japan.

Street, G. E. Mount Desert: a history; ed. by S. A. Eliot, with a memorial introd. by Wilbert L. Anderson. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. [S.] c. 16+370 p. pors. map, plan, facsim., cl., $2.50 net. For a quarter of a century Dr. Street passed his summers at Southwest Harbor. Mount Desert, becoming thoroughly familiar with the beautiful island, and by acquaintance with the permanent residents of Mount Desert and neighboring islands learning a great deal of local history and legend. This first-hand knowledge has been supplemented by exhaustive study of letters and documents relating to the early history of our country. At the time of his death, in 1904, Dr. Street had not entirely completed this work, so that it fell to the share of Samuel E. Eliot to put it into shape for publication. Herein are described the discovery of Mount Desert in 1604 by Champlain; the French Jesuit settlements on the island some years later; then the English occupation after the French and Indian War, and subsequent history as pioneer colony and summer resort. Tells the story, with a slight thread of fiction interwoven, of an American physician, fifty-three years old, who is obliged to give up his profession on account of ill-health. He decides to start a factory farm. Backed by a very comfortable private income, he can afford to sink a good deal of money in his experiment and then wait for results, unharassed by anxiety. Beginning with the purchase of a 320-acre farm, the author recounts his experiences with the cost of each during the first seven years, proving that his farm at all events is a profitable investment. First published in 1904; now issued in this paper edition.

The story of a boy who was neither a very good boy nor a very bad one. He was the ringleader in all the boyish mischief perpetrated in the small town in which he lived—but he had also to his credit several heroic acts. The story is interspersed with original poetry. Mr. Stringer has published a volume of poems, and also a novel—"The Silver Poppy."

Belchamber was one of the most beautiful show places in England. The heir to this home and grand old name, with his younger brother, are the heroes of a modern story of high life, which is by no means a flattering picture of the English "smart" set. Both brothers make unhappy marriages with women almost entirely devoid of honor or morality. Many scenes of intrigue and contention make up the novel.

The anonymous author of "Calmire," published in 1892, has now collected his views on the labor question, the woman question, questions of art, literature, education and all questions now before the civilized world. He puts his ideas into the mouths of many of the same characters that in the former book discussed chiefly of religion. He holds that all reform and progress must be the outcome of the evolution of the individual which must be helped along in the directions suggested by the special characteristics with which nature has endowed him. Only a thread of story. The book is sociological.

Edward Moran died in New York in 1901. In the following year litigation was begun by the executor of his estate regarding the maritime paintings here described, which the artist had presented to his wife. The suit was carried to several courts and finally decided in favor of Mrs. Moran in 1904. The writer of this book was chief attorney in the case and became so interested in the pictures that he wrote these brief descriptions and the biographical note to accompany the reproductions here given.

Theodore Watts-Dunton unearthed this "bantling" of the poet's youth. A prologue gives a short history of three related families. Then the story is told in letters, the most brilliant of which are from an old English matron who keeps her sons, daughters-in-law and grandchildren well in hand. There are many "skeletons" in the closets of these people related by law and some epigrammatic wit about the manners and ways of English society.

The average hard-working American father and the average half-invalid, extravagant American mother have raised the average family of spoiled children. Reverses come. Joan, the daughter of fourteen, generally overlooked because her sister is far prettier to average eyes, seeks out her hardly known father and offers him suggestions for running the household, and her steady, cheerful help. An old-fashioned aunt also appears and a much happier, united family is the outcome of the trial that first seemed so disastrous.

A short, simple history of the literature of England by one who thoroughly loves her subject and has devoted a long time to the study and teaching of it. It begins with a brief study of the beginnings of English literature, and then traces the progress made in each century down to the present time. At the end of each chapter is a brief summary. There is also a table of important dates and a list of such references as a teacher would need in the ordinary high school work.

The style of an Italian writing English lends charm to this story of a young Neapolitan reduced to earn wages by having the advertisement of a low Paris vaudeville painted on his shaved crown. A streak of luck gives this man the supervision of a young American travelling for pleasure. The consequences are humorous and pathetic. The strength and weakness of American idiosyncrasies are cleverly put.

The scent is again a typical, incongruous Indiana town and the action of the story is within recent memory. Joe Loudon, the hero, is introduced as a town outcast, but he has daring and humor and soon gives indications of innate worth. His only friend is Ariel Tabor, a crude girl of seventeen, the daughter of an extremely poor artist, who herself cherishes artistic dreams. Ariel gets rich, Joe is forced to leave town. When they meet again much has happened and there is a good story of the triumph of character and circumstances.

The story of "Marion Harland's" life in Richmond, where she attended school, a girl of fourteen, before the war. She is the "grandmamma" who now tells the story to her grandchildren. It is full of lights and shadows, being both amusing and pathetic. She becomes innocently involved in the attempted elopement of her school chum, Sidney, a girl of sixteen, with a worthless fellow, and again has a dramatic experience with a girl who is a kleptomaniac. Other experiences equally stirring are embraced in her description of her school and her teachers and schoolmates. She is not without a love affair of her own.

Thanet, Octave. [pseud. for Alice French.]

The man of the hour; il. by Lucius Wolcott Hitchcock. Indianapolis, Ind., Bobbs-Merrill Co., 1905. 8+477 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"Johnny-Ivan" Winslow's father was a self-made man, hard-headed but just in his dealings with his employees in the big plough works. His mother was a Russian princess, imbued with Socialistic theories, beautiful and passionate, who had married the American in order to escape from Russian tyranny. Naturally the marriage was a failure and when "Johnny-Ivan" was ten years old, his parents separated, the boy remaining with his father. An introspective, loving, winning child, he grew to manhood torn between loyalty to his adored mother and duty to his father, whom he learned too late to appreciate. After leaving Harvard, he proceeded to put into practice his Tolstoyan theories, throwing in his lot with Chicago working men; contributing his fortune to the Pullman strike, of which there are many glimpses, and, finally, supporting himself and three orphaned children as a steel worker. The labor conditions in the Middle West of fifteen years ago are worked into the plot.

Theodore Thomas died last year in his 70th year. He came to this country a boy, when music was just beginning to find appreciation here. He helped more than any man in its development, and lived to see it reach its highest limit. He wrote his own life, telling of the great singers and musicians he met, and his critical estimate of their powers. The warm appreciation of his own gifts by contemporaries, forms a large part of the first volume. The second volume is a binding together of his concert programmes.

Thorpe, Francis Newton. The divining rod: a story of the oil regions. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1905. 5+356 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

A realistic story of the oil fields in their early days, dealing with the discovery, development and exploitations of oil, how it all led to lust for gain, unscrupulous methods to acquire money, the squeezing out of the small concerns by the larger one and by the "legitimate methods" so well described in the tale. A story of home life and family devotion lightens the sombreness of the pictures of man's love of money, which is here shown to be indeed the "root of all evil," revealed in the plot.

An argument against celibacy in the priesthood is presented in the person of Father Michael Everett, a Catholic priest whose parish is a little Irish village. He is but twenty-five when the story opens, and had taken his vows when only twenty-one, before he knew life or his own nature. His awakening comes through a story told him in the confessional. He begins to think, and thinks so deeply, that his health is impaired. He is told to take a holiday and goes to France. There a young girl comes into his life, and the rest of the story is devoted to an account of his desperate struggle against temptation. The book is dedicated to the author's wife, Mrs. Katherine Cecil Thurston, who wrote "The Circle" and "The Masquerader."

Thurston, Katherine Cecil. The gambler: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [S.] c. 3+409 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The study of a fresh and most attractive personality, by the author of "The Masquerader." Clodagh Asslin, the heroine, is a young Irish beauty, who inherits from her father a fearless, impulsive, high-spirited disposition and a keen sense of honor, along with a passion for gambling. She marries her father's friend, a rich man older than her father, because he pays her father's debts. Her husband takes her to Italy, where she learns something of life and develops into a woman; she is thrown into the society of a fast English set, and is tempted to play cards. Her elderly husband's sudden death, her intense love for another and a younger man, and her financial difficulties, bring the story to a startling climax.

Contents: V. 11, Memorable days in America, being a journal of a tour to the United States, principally undertaken to ascertain, by positive evidence, the condition and probable prospects of British emigrants; including accounts of Mr. Birkbeck's settlement in the Illinois, by W. Faux, an English farmer. A separate title-page comes with this volume for those who may wish to bind their copies as individual volumes. V. 12, Part 2 of Memorable days in America by W. Faux, an English farmer; also a visit to North America and the English settlements in Illinois, with a winter residence at Philadelphia, solely to ascertain the actual prospects of the emigrating agriculturist, mechanic, and commercial speculator, by Adlard Welby, Esq., who travelled through the West during the years 1819-1820. This book contains much original observation and is illustrated with numerous plates, showing early views of towns, landscapes, etc. A separate title-page comes with this volume for those who may wish to bind their copies as individual volumes, apart from the set. V. 13, Journal of Travels into the Arkansas Territory during the year 1819, with occasional observations on the manners of the aborigines, by Thomas Nuttall. A record of travels replete with interesting incidents and of scientific accuracy of statement. V. 14, Part 1 of Major S. H. Long's Expedition from Pittsburg to the Rocky Mountains, performed in the years 1819, 1820, by order of the Secretary of War. This expedition, it is said, was in many respects much better qualified and fitted out than that of Lewis and Clark, and the narrative makes highly important additions to our knowledge of the Mississippi and Missouri valleys. V. 15, Part 2 of Major S. H. Long's Expedition from Pittsburg to the Rocky Mountains, 1819-1820. Deals with the Mississippi Valley and the Western plains and their early Indian occupation. V. 16, pt. 3 of Long's Expedition from Pittsburg to the Rocky Mountains, 1819-1820. V. 17, pt. 4. Conclusion of Long's Expedition from Pittsburg to the Rocky Mountains, 1819-1820. V. 18, Personal narrative of James O. Pattie, of Kentucky, written during an expedition from St. Louis, through the vast regions between that place and the Pacific Ocean, and thence back through the City of Mexico to Vera Cruz. Account covers journeyings of six years, in which Pattie and his father, who accompanied him, suffered unheard of hardships and dangers, had various conflicts with the Indians, and were made captives. While in captivity his father died. Gives a description of the country and the various nations through which the travellers passed. V. 19, Ogden's letters from the West; Bullock's sketch of a journey through the Western States; Accounts of the Ohio Valley; Gregg's Commerce of the prairies: a description of the Santa Fe trail. V. 20 completes Gregg's Commerce of the prairies. V. 21, Wyeth's Oregon, or, a short history of a long journey from the Atlantic Ocean to the region of the Pacific, by land; and Townsend's Journey across the Rocky Mountains, to the Columbia River. Townsend was sent by the American Philosophical Society and the Academy of Natural Sciences to accompany Wyeth. His account is replete with interest, adventure and scientific observation. V. 22, First part of Maximilien's (Prince of Wied-Neuwied) voyage in the Interior of North America. Maximilien's Voyage will be complete in three volumes with large folio atlas.

The Dunmore war of 1774 was the culmination of a long series of mutual grievances and outrages between the frontiersmen of Virginia and Pennsylvania and the savages of the Ohio Valley. The volume is the first considerable publication directly from the Draper Manuscript Collection, and exhibits the character and scope of that remarkable store of material for the original study of the beginnings of the Middle West.

Thwing, Eugene. The man from Red Keg; il. by Walter H. Everett. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1905. 4+431 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is the same as that of the author's "The Red Keggars," somewhere in the farming and lumbering regions of Kentucky. A young printer comes to the little town of Midland and soon makes himself felt in the affairs of the town and in its social life. He soon comes into opposition with the talented but unprincipled "editor" who has been a power. The printer exposes some rascally swindles and begins a work of reform in the district.

The author of "Chimmie Fadden" was for two years private secretary to a very wealthy United States Senator from the far West. Here he had exceptional advantages to study the methods of "grafters." The hero inherits wealth and comes from simple college life in the country to the home of his ancestors in New York. The world of high-toned grafters is exposed with startling detail. The hero is an idealist, but learns common sense as well. He remains honest and love leads him in the way of his best possibilities.

So called from the connection of the Hero with Pang-Yang tannery in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Embittered by lack of sympathy in his own family, hardened by later Western experiences, Abijah Bead returns rich to his old home in Delaware; falls in love with and secretly marries a beautiful, soulless girl, who, thereafter, deserts their child and marries another man, trusting to her husband's reticence and to lack of proof of her first marriage. She is confronted by her boy whose resemblance to her is unmistakable to all eyes but those of her fatuous second husband. Political success comes to the Pang-Yanger; and he also falls in love with an emotional, fascinating Southerner. There seems to both no outcome save to choose between renunciation or known sin, when an insane negress solves the problem for all.

Trow, C. E. The old shipmasters of Salem; with mention of eminent merchants. N. Y., Putnam, 1905. c. 27+337 p. il. O. cl., $2.50 net.

Tells of the good old days when Salem was the leading port in New England and her trading vessels were known on every sea. The Salem merchants were unusual men, and on their long voyages for silks and spices they encountered strange adventures. These are graphically related by Mr. Trow, and enlivened by many amusing anecdotes. He has collected many portraits of the old shipmasters, and pictures of the vessels in which they sailed, and of the buildings at home where they stored their goods and wealth.

Dating from the assassination of Von Plehve, the Minister of the Interior, on July 28, 1904, this work tells of the revolution that is at present rending the Russian nation. The acts of the executive that for years have been leading up to the general dissatisfaction are critically examined and fairly judged and presented. Vigorous and truthful pictures are given of the present Czar, and his ancestors, and of all the leading men of Russia. A minute analysis of Baron de Witte's character and career is rich in interest.

They include two volumes of the President's Reports and eight volumes of investigations, the latter consisting of articles representing the work of research of the several departments of the university organized during the decennium. These articles have been issued before in paper form, and together in volumes. Each volume, including the President's reports, is a perfect treasure-house of information and original research by different writers, which we have not space to specify. Briefly we give the contents: v. 1 and 2, President's reports; v. 3, Systematic theology, church history, practical theology; v. 4, Political economy, Political science, History, Sociology; v. 5, The Semitic languages and literatures, Biblical and Patristic Greek; v. 6, The Greek language and literature, the Latin language and literature, Sanskrit and Indo-European comparative philology, Classical archaeology; v. 7, The romance languages and literatures, the Germanic languages and literatures, English literatures in English; v. 8, Astronomy and astro-physics; v. 9, Mathematics, chemistry, physics, geology; v. 10, Zoology, anatomy, physiology, neurology, botany, pathology, bacteriology.

The author is an English barrister who wrote "Secrets of the courts of Europe" in 1897; and "Secret history of to-day: the revelations of a diplomatic spy," in 1904, both showing prophetic insight into the problems of the monarchs of Europe. In this story the author makes clear the sinking of the English fishing schooners by the Baltic fleet of Russia and brings in all kinds of events that seemed hallucinations when the story appeared serially, but which have since come true in startling manner.

The brothers are Archie and Mark Samphire two English boys, whose history begins at Harrow. Archie the elder boy is a strong, handsome fellow but without any trace of great gifts; Mark physically weak and lacking his brother's good looks is a genius, and as the author says "a born fighter," but ready to give and to sacrifice everything for the elder brother. Further on, after college days, they both love the same woman. With these conditions, a most interesting story has been evolved, that has its scenes among refined and highly educated people.

Valera must be counted among the realists of Spanish fiction. His "Comendador Mendoza" is one of his best achievements. "For loftiness of tone," says Prof. Schwill, "for consummate skill in the presentation of the chief characters, notably of the Comendador, for ease and grace of description, this novel deserves to be set by the side of his universally known "Pepita Jiménez."

These studies illustrate the period of the Renaissance by describing three typical characters who were all living at the same time in Germany, England and Italy. These three men are the German Emperor, Maximilian I.; the English chief minister, Thomas Cromwell; and the Venetian litterateur, Pietro Aretino. An introductory chapter on the Renaissance prepares the reader for the separate treatment of each man; and there is an appendix relating to Cromwell and Reginald Pole, and also a seven-page list of books cited. The cotton mills of South Carolina with their poorly paid, overworked operatives, dirty, degraded and often half-starved, furnish the characters. Amanda is a "hand" in the Grismore mills, saved only from falling to the very lowest moral depths, through her passionate, protective love for an apparently utterly hopeless outcast, a man of refinement and education, but conquered by his love of drink. Amanda is his one good influence, and in time he redeems himself, and becomes a labor leader. Amanda has been taken to Europe by Mrs. Grismore, educated and adopted and made her heiress. After years she returns to her old environment, and again is thrown with Henry Euston. The revelations at the end are unexpected and dramatic.

The niece's mother has been divorced and has made a brilliant second marriage and is still "talked about" much to her sister Virginia's discomfort. Circumstances awaken Miss Desmond; she loves a man she thinks wicked, but she sacrifices herself and resigns the man to her niece. After some years her reward comes to her in the autumn garden of her beautiful New England home.

This, the first volume of the County Records of Virginia containing the Records of Spotsylvania Co., is published under the auspices of the Genealogical Association by Fox, Duffield & Co. The enterprise involves the first attempt to put into accessible form some of the most valuable of the early documents of the country. The importance of the undertaking is inestimable. Many of the original records, owing to the vicissitudes of time and war, have been destroyed, and it is imperative, if the remainder also are not to be lost to posterity, to print them before age has rendered them totally illegible. The transcriptions are being done by a resident genealogist of experience.

The romance of which the letters here given are the evidence, extended over fifty years of Victor Hugo's life. Madame Drouet was a young actress when Hugo first met her; the connection then formed was continued to the end of her life, and was known to the great French writer's wife, children and friends. Around the letters, Mr. Wack has written a sketch of Hugo's life during his exile in Guernsey, with many anecdotes and extracts from his correspondence, illustrative of his personality.

The founding of a free state in the very heart of savage and cannibalistic Africa, by the wisdom of a kindly philanthropist—Leopold II., King of the Belgians, is one of the achievements of the 19th century, almost unrecorded. Mr. Wack, a member of the New York bar, a student of mid-African affairs for the past seven years, has felt it his duty to tell to Americans the true story of the conception and development of the Congo Free State. The King of the Belgians gave him access to the archives of the administration of the Congo Free State in Brussels, and assisted by these he has told his wonderful story without prejudice, and with apparent truthfulness.

Waddell, C: Carey, ["C: Carey," psud.] The Van Suyden sapphires. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1905. c. 6+333 p. il. D. cl., †$1.50.

An English actress in quest of notoriety, makes an ingenious plan in which a valuable necklace of rubies is to be apparently stolen from her. She is visiting at the great country home of the Van Suydens and has placed her rubies in the safe of Mrs. Van Suyden. She carries out the plan so far as the disappearance of her rubies, but at the same time Mrs. Van Suyden's priceless sapphires disappear—how she does not know. Of course, a number of persons are suspected and followed before the real thief is discovered—the seemingly most innocent person being the criminal.

The letters in Pt. 1 of this work were written by Mrs. Waddington to her mother and sister after her husband had resigned the Premiership of France in December, 1879. The following month the Waddingtons went for rest and recreation to Italy, residing chiefly in Rome. The letters of Part 2 relate the incidents of a similar Roman sojourn some twenty years later. Mr. Waddington having died in the meantime. The two series of letters present graphic pictures of life and society in the Italian capital, corresponding with those of London and Moscow in the author's "Letters of a diplomat's wife."

Wallace, Sir Donald Mackenzie. Russia. New ed., rev., enl. and in great part rewritten. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1905. c. 20+672 p. por. folding maps, 8°, cl., $5.

The first edition of this work, published in 1877, contained the results of the author's six years' residence in Russia. Since then he has spent almost two years in the European and Central Asian provinces and has kept closely in touch with the progress of events. Determined at first to write an entirely new work on Russia, Wallace found upon investigation that the changes during the last quarter century had been all along the old lines; everywhere he perceived "continuity and evolution." So instead of writing an entirely new book, the author has prepared a much extended and amplified edition of the old one, reviewing, rearranging and supplementing the old material in the light of subsequent events. Five new chapters have been added, three on the revolutionary movement, one on the industrial progress, and another on the main lines of the present situation. The book has long been considered a standard work.

It is easy to trace a resemblance between Mrs. Ward's characters and a notorious group of English people of the eighteenth century, although presented in the environment of a later period and with changed names and appearances. Lady Kitty Bristol who becomes the wife of William Ashe displays many of the eccentricities, brilliant talents and personal beauty that made Lady Caroline Lamb famous. Madame d'Estrees is certainly a portrait of Lady Blessington and Geoffrey Cliffe's career is suspiciously like Byron's in some details. William Ashe only presents the finer side of William Lamb's character—who later became Lord Melbourne and Prime Minister of England. Politics and love, with charmingly lifelike scenes from English high-life are the substance of the novel. William Ashe's unhappy marriage parallels that of William Lamb. His political career is also similar.

Warner, Anne, [Mrs. C: Ellis French.] The rejuvenation of Aunt Mary. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1905. [O.] c. 5+323 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The author of "Susan Clegg and her friend Mrs. Lathrop" has created a new character in "Aunt Mary," who will be found quite as amusing as her predecessors. She is an extremely deaf and extremely rich maiden lady, who late in life becomes the guardian of several nieces and nephews. The chief of these is her nephew Jack, whom she quite adores. He is a tall, handsome fellow, who comes out of one scrape only to fall into another. Finally he is expelled from college and disinherited by "Aunt Mary." Jack represents himself broken-hearted and persuades "Aunt Mary" to visit New York. How he reinstates himself in her affections, with the aid of his college friends, by giving her "the time of her life" is a story of the wildest fun.

A study of the Jew of history and of to-day. The author is an American and thinks the Jew will amalgamate with all the other foreigners in time. He thinks the religion of the Jews will resolve itself in time with all other religions into the one lasting religion which he words: "The human being is the thing." What the Jew really was and is and his contribution to civilization are put with effectiveness, clearness and humor. The author claims that every theology separated from state control works toward the same end, the survival of the truth regardless of fixed doctrine.

A historical study of the period of which Mirabeau was one of the chief figures. The author dwells upon the characteristics of the man most largely responsible for the position maintained during the days of terror, and dwells especially upon the far reaching influence of the Revolution upon the future of France as a nation. Specially thoughtful are the chapters on the Louis (xiv., xv. and xvi.), on Marie Antoinette, on the American Revolution and on Benjamin Franklin at the French court.

Presents Washington's attitude toward one of the great national policies of the early Republic—expansion and internal improvements. This is the first time this diary, which shows Washington as country squire and landowner, has been printed in toto. The commentary prepared by the author of "Historic highways of America" combines an historical essay and explanatory footnotes. There are carefully drawn maps of Braddock's Road, Washington County, the route of Washington's trip in 1784 and Washington's own map of the country between the Potomac and Youngbusheny.

A series of sketches depicting the present condition along the Maine coast where the inhabitants, fine old American stock, have somewhat degenerated. The characters are mostly retired fishermen. A "shay" is an old local type of fishing boat. Two connecting threads run through the book—one, the love of a young sea-captain for Clara Fairway, the niece and ward of his friend, a retired veteran; the other, the experience of a young minister who works sensibly and hard for the regeneration of Kentle Harbor.

"The aim of this work," says the author in his preface, "is to convince astronomers that there's no such power in this universe as attraction or repulsion in operation to-day; or, that it ever existed, except in the belief or imagination of those who follow this science. This earth is not clad in polished steel, nor magnetic iron, nor in the solution used as a substitute for that purpose, nor are any of the planets from the smallest to the greatest. The fact that they are forever changing their positions from day to day ought in itself be sufficient evidence to destroy that fallacy. . . ."

While Marcia is on a visit a wheat famine occurs in the land and the peasants grow very angry over the luxurious life and careless generosity of innocent Marcia and her relatives. It soon develops that Marcia's millionaire father has cornered the wheat market. Marcia's lover first makes her think and shows her Italy's life and troubles from all sides. The scenes are picturesque and there are many thrilling incidents before all again goes well.

An opening chapter on present-day lynch-law is followed by an outline of the Jewish law as administered by the Sanhedrim in the time of Christ, special emphasis being laid on the orderly and deliberate method of procedure. Then in glaring contrast the author describes the trial of Jesus, and shows wherein it was contrary to all accepted Hebrew laws, and, therefore, must have been simply the result of mob rule.

The characters are an old lady and her four grandchildren. They had all seen better days, but misfortunes had deprived them of a comfortable fortune. They have been boarding in New York City, and hate the restrictions of their surrounding, when it is remembered that they own a fully furnished hotel in New Jersey which their lawyer cannot find a purchaser for. As the summer is opening it is determined they go live there. The account of their experience in keeping house and taking boarders is told with exceeding great humor.

Patty Fairfield leaves her home in Vernondale, New Jersey, in the beginning of the story, and comes with her father and Grandma Elliott to New York City for the winter. Her father desires that she shall go to school another year, and also take up music. Mr. Fairfield rents a fine apartment facing Central Park and Patty's school days begin again. The story relates her experiences at a fashionable school, and describes her schoolmates, and also pictures her many happy Saturday afternoons at the circus, theatre, etc.

Wells, Carolyn, and Taber, Harry Persons. The matrimonial bureau. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. c. 5+282 p. il. D. cl., †$1.50.

The success of Miss Esther Adams' German maid in winning quite a desirable husband through a matrimonial bureau suggests to the middle-aged maiden lady to do a like service for some of her young friends in the little town where her pretty home is situated. So she forms a house party of attractive young men, and the fun begins, the wildest complications ensuing, driving the would-be matchmaker almost to desperation.

Wells, Herbert G: Kipps: the story of a simple soul. N. Y., Scribner, 1905. c. 6+479 p. D. cl., $1.50.

In a little rural spot in England Kipps was brought up by an aunt and uncle until at the age of fourteen he was apprenticed for seven years to a draper in a little town. The old system of "bound help" is described in detail. Kipps inherits a fortune and is launched into society. A girl captures him and tries to educate him in the frills and fads of modern social circles. Kipps does not respond, the engagement is broken and a girl of his own class and from his old home finally makes him happy. He has no aspirations higher than a shop. He deals in second-hand books as merchandise and other articles needed by average people. Kipps' views of life afford the author room for many facts of modern social inanity.

Wells, Herbert G: A modern Utopia; with il. by E. J. Sullivan. N. Y., Scribner, 1905. c. '04. 11+393 p. D. cl., $1.50 net.

The author has written his philosophy of life in "Anticipations," "Mankind in the making" and in this volume in which he says he has written "the heretical, metaphysical skepticism upon which all my thinking rests, and I have inserted certain sections reflecting upon the established methods of sociological and academic science." This Utopia is a world state with a world language. The questions of race, individualism, government, labor problems, marriage and all the thought now absorbing liberal, scientific thinkers are discussed in a thin vein of fiction, two imaginary middle-class Englishmen voicing some of the thoughts. The Athenæum says: "No work of this importance has been published for the last thirty years."

With this volume, the account of the famous battles of the 19th century is brought to an end, with the second war of the British against the Boers still in progress. "It was a long period," the editor says, "and its scenes are laid in every quarter of the globe. We chronicle the passing of the red man as a hostile enemy on our own continent, and the beginning of the development of the United States as a world power by the war against Spain and other events which occurred towards the close of the nineteenth century."

The hero of Rostand's l'Aiglon was the ill-starred son of Napoleon 1, and Marie Louise of Austria. By the succession of historical events he was known as King of Rome, Prince of Parma, Napoleon II, and Duke of Reichstadt. He was born March 20, 1811 and died July 22, 1832. He died too young to find scope for his capacity to rule which seems to have been of a high order. His death was a severe blow to those Frenchmen who thought that with him they had lost the guarantee against the aggression of foreign powers. The author has made exhaustive search among the archives of France and Austria and has found much new material.

An exposition and discussion of the basic principles of the Catholic Church founded by Christ, as an evidence of the love of the Son of God for man, and now known as the Established Church of England and the Episcopal Church of America. The author examines the church's claims as a Catholic religion and its position in regard to the Incarnation. Chapters are devoted to the priesthood, sacraments, worship, etc., with a concluding discussion of the Roman Catholic claims.

The hero is William Shakespeare, introduced as a lad caught in the act of poaching. He is brought before the queen, who is induced to pardon him through the intercession of one of her maids Anne Hathaway. The rest of his story is played chiefly in Elizabeth's court, the queen being shown as desperately in love with him. His comedies are produced under her patronage. Essex, Leicester and other of her favorites figure in the story, which ends with Shakespeare's marriage to Anne Hathaway.

Westrup, Margaret. The coming of Billy. N. Y., Harper, 1905. c. 2+267 p. D. cl., *$1.25.

A fine manly little boy was Billy, sent by his soldier father from India to England to the care of four maiden aunts, because the climate of India was beginning to tell on him. Great preparations had been made for him at Rose Cottage, but Billy refused to be coddled, and turns out to be very little of an invalid, and a perfect mine of activity and mischief. His aunts are in great consternation at his misdeeds, all but Aunt Primrose, the youngest and prettiest of the four, with whom he becomes great chums. There is a little romance between Aunt Primrose and the curate, which Billy actively aids in forwarding in his own impish way.

The scene is rural England in the rugged North: the time a few years, after the Battle of Waterloo. It is the story of an elopement, but the eloping heroine does not marry the man with whom she elopes, but the one from whom she flees. The reader's sympathies pass from one character to the other and the interest increases to the last unexpected surprise.

Wharton, Mrs. Edith Newbold Jones. The house of mirth; il. by A. B. Wenzell. N. Y., Scribner, 1905. c. 2+533 p. D. cl., *$1.50.

A novel tracing the career of Lily Bart, a beautiful, fascinating young woman, a conspicuous figure in New York society of to-day. In an atmosphere of gossip and bridge, surrounded by a crowd of shallow, empty-headed people, whose only thought is the amusement of the moment, Lily is led into a succession of indiscretions to keep up her social position, which finally cause her to be thrown over by the selfish, heartless crowd with which she is identified. She sinks from one level to another, until at last she is seen in a shabby boarding house, vainly striving to earn a living. In her distress she finds herself without a friend; even the men who had striven to win her turn away. Her character is most artistically developed, while the scenes of fashionable life, with their silly actors, are depicted with stinging satire. The title of the book is taken from a verse in Ecclesiastes—"The heart of fools is in the house of mirth."

Two thick volumes testify to Mr. White's activities in many fields—education, politics, statecraft, diplomacy, and literature. In 1855, when just through college, Mr. White went to St. Petersburg as an attaché of the American legation; after that for three years he was a student at Berlin and Paris and in other parts of Europe. For 30 years he was president of Cornell University; minister to Germany in 1879-1881, and to Russia in 1892-1894, etc. From this unusual experience he has written a work of exceptional interest, describing historical episodes and events, and the great men involved in them.

Whiting, Lillian. The Florence of Landor; il. from photographs. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1905. [N.] c. 7+329 p. O. cl., $2.50 net.

Book derived from record of several summers passed in Florence. Author makes living again to the reader some of the great writers who have been so closely associated with Florence. Among these were the Brownings, Lady Blessington, Frances Power Cobbe, Charlotte Cushman, George Eliot, Trollope, Henry James, James Russell Lowell, the Storys, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and many more that came and went in Florence from 1821 to 1864. Gotten up as a holiday book. Some of the photographs were taken expressly for this volume, and the frontispiece is from Charles Caryll Coleman's oil portrait of Landor in his latest years, owned by Miss Whiting, and which has never before been reproduced.

Whitson, J: Harvey. Justin Wingate, ranchman; with il. from drawings by Arthur E. Becher. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1905. [Ap.] c. 6+311 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

Justin Wingate had been brought as a waif to the house of the minister in Paradise, an almost abandoned spot in Colorado. A physician of means, abandoned by his wife drifts to the spot and stays, undertaking the education of the boy. The agricultural development by irrigation of a Western ranch section and the constant differences between ranchmen and farmers to control the legislature make a virile story. Describes in detail the sufferings of the cattle and the selfishness of the average Western settler. At last the dream of the minister is realized.

The Saco Valley, Maine, is the scene of a pretty love story. The heroine is the village belle, whose vanity leads her for a time away from the man who sincerely loves her. The hero is a logger, although a college man. Logging and jam-breaking on the Saco river play important parts in the narrative. The minor characters are quaintly humorous, realistic portraits of New England village types.

Wilkins, W. H. Mrs. Fitzherbert and George iv. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1905. [N.] c. 20+476 p. pors. O. cl., *$5 net.

One of the romances of the later Georgian era was the marriage of Mrs. Fitzherbert and George, Prince of Wales, afterwards George iv. This marriage was not only never acknowledged, but twice denied in the House of Commons. Before Mrs. Fitzherbert's death, in 1833, she reserved certain papers from destruction, and deposited them in Messrs. Coutts' Bank. No one up to the present time has ever been allowed to see these papers. But through the gracious permission of King Edward, Mr. Wilkins had been allowed to inspect and publish them, or such extracts from them as were necessary to vindicate Mrs. Fitzherbert's character. They establish beyond doubt the fact of a marriage, which, if not legal according to English law, was admitted by the church to be morally binding. These papers and letters with other new material, and many rare portraits, make a volume of unusual value and interest.

The framework of the story is not unlike "The lightning conductor" and "The princess passes," and it is just as full of fun and amusing incidents. A young English Lord, rather hard up, owning a large automobile, is entrapped by a friend into playing the part of chauffeur to a party of rich Americans. One is a young widow, who is pursued by an Austrian prince, also the owner of an automobile. The whole party tour through France and Italy. There is a good deal of love making and pairing off at the end, with some surprises.

Wilson, Bingham Thoburn. The village of Hide and Seek; il. by W. Herbert Dunton. N. Y., Consolidated Retail Booksellers, 1905. c. 190 p. O. cl., $1.25.

Two children, who have been driven away from the village inn by a cross grandfather, are led by an old woman, a reputed witch, up the mountain-side to the village of Hide and Seek. It is a village of tiny play houses, lived in by dolls and ruled over by this witch, who is a sister of Santa Claus and Queen of the dolls. The story tells all that befell the children in this delightful place.

The author of "The Spenders" here tells the story of a little village community in an ideal spot in the Middle West. The boss at first was an importer. He was killed; his wife appeared and taught the village many things. Then came a Southern woman of great charm, then the character who so humorously tells the story, then his love. In turn each was a "boss" and the village grew and learned under each influence. The village paper and its editor were also live forces in the little town just "after the war was over."

Many family relations work together to fret the soul of the lord in possession. Money and debt play decisive parts, at first leading to tragedy. The women of the story play the stronger parts for good or evil.

Seven short essays, intended to state in a simple and practical manner the essential principles of religion, and to clear it from the confusion arising from theological changes and historical criticism. The author starts with the conception of religion as a universal, inevitable human experience; distinguishes it from other things with which it is often confused—as theology and morality; shows its intimate connection with the life of society; and suggests how its essence may be kept in spite of changing views on minor points.

Story of the Russian Jews, centering in the experiences of a Jewish girl, forced into marriage with an ignorant student from whom she escapes a few hours after their marriage. She flies to Hamburg, thence to America. Years after she returns to Russia to search for her real parents; becomes involved with the Nihilists and assists in the assassination of Alexander II., discovered too late to be her father, and is transported to Siberia where she is chain-mate with the man whom she married years before. The story ends satisfactorily after many mysteries. The marriage customs of Russian Jews are described in detail, and Jewish fanaticism towards their own erring brethren is shown.

A compilation from authentic American works by two English army officers. The subject is treated mainly from a strategical standpoint. The political and diplomatic side of the war is only alluded to when it exercised a direct influence upon the military course of events. The naval operations are dealt with in a separate chapter, and to the accounts of the more important battles are added appendices emphasizing the chief points of controversy. Detailed maps illustrate the various campaigns, and tactical plans accompany the account of the chief battles.

Born April 5, 1837, Swinburne has been for half a century above the critics. His education was the best that England and abundant means could supply. He is a scholar and he knows literature of every race and time. The writer explains fairly Swinburne's attitude towards the Christian religion, and traces his meditative power that finally displaced the passionate impulse of the senses in his verse and his special genius as a poet of nature.

The idea underlies the book that as each race reaches perfect development, it normally dies and passes on to another race, with the results of its own culture, the mission of the humanization of mankind. The titles of lectures are: Man and the race; The language of all the world; two papers on The Titan myth; Spencer; Milton; Wordsworth; Shelley. The author is equally interested in every race and in literature as the possession of the human spirit.

Senator Wigfall, of Texas, was the father of Mrs. Wright, who in 1860, when her story begins, was Miss Louise Wigfall, just entering into society, and deeply and bitterly interested in the success of the Southern Confederacy. Her father, as Colonel Wigfall, was noted for his dash and bravery during the war, and held a position on General Beauregard's staff. Her narrative relates chiefly to the social side of the Confederacy, and to her father's and brother's parts in its history. She tells many capital anecdotes of noted people, and quotes many interesting letters. Illustrated with numerous portraits taken from old-fashioned photographs.

Wright, Mrs. Mabel Osgood, ["Barbara," pseud.] At the sign of the fox: a romance. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. 5+372 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.
An sensational story of probable and possible incidents and of real people, permeated with the same love of nature and of dumb animals that characterized the "People of the whirlpool" and "The garden of a commuter's wife," by the same author. A New York family living in luxury, are reduced to comparative poverty by the failure of the father. The shock of his losses gives him a paralytic stroke, and the care of the family devolves practically upon the eldest daughter. She opens a tea garden in a Boston suburb, and has various experiences, amusing and otherwise.
